The Democratic State Convention at Syracuse—Slim Attendance and Dull Session—The Anti-Tammany in the Majority—A Weak Platform—Attack of the Fifteenth Amendment—The Nominations—Impromptu Speeches. Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Wednesday, Sept. 22.

The State Convention of the Democracy, after three sessions, the last one continuing late into the night, has closed its labors and its candidates and platform are now before the people. As I predicted, the proceedings were harmonious and exceedingly dull. The morning session was principally occupied in listening to a windy speech from SAM TILDEN, introductory to his legitimate business of calling the Convention to order. His design appeared to be to forestall the action of the Convention in the matter of the platform and commit them at the outset to his peculiar notions about the negro, the Chinese and those other odds and ends of humanity who, he argues, are not capable of being "amalgamated into homogeneous society," and who therefore ought not to be admitted to the right of suffrage. The speech fell dead upon the audience, and was evidently regarded as a bore; but MR. TILDEN secured his object and got a platform, which, so far as it means anything, is homogeneous with his speech. There were many members of the Convention, and some on the Committee on Resolutions, who were anxious to place the Democracy of the Empire State in a more advanced position than it has hitherto occupied, and to ignore the "dead past." But they were in the minority, and had to succumb to the anti-diluvians. BEACH's speech as President of the Convention amounted to nothing, and was commendable only for its brevity. There was no contest over the candidates except for State Prison Inspector, and Judge of the Court of Appeals for the short term. EARL's success over GRAY for the latter office was a Tammany defeat, GRAY being counsel for the Erie Railroad, with which the Ring is so closely identified. Tammany, in fact, got nothing by this Convention, and professed to desire nothing. They call it a Seymour Convention. They allowed it to be run exclusively by Seymourites, and if they were to tell the truth they don't care a continental copper whether it is followed by success or defeat. The Convention was very slimly attended, and at the evening session, when the resolutions were adopted, not more than half even of the delegates were present, the other half having taken the early evening trains for home. The reading of the resolutions elicited no enthusiasm or applause, and a majority of the Convention were evidently ashamed of the cautious and non-committal style in which they are worded. They were drawn by CASSIDY, of the Albany Argus, but the original draft underwent many modifications in committee. The new Constitution was repudiated altogether, notwithstanding CASSIDY's desire to save the Judiciary clause. The resolution about naturalized citizens was written by O'GORMAN, who backed it up by a speech in which he claimed that we are all a nation of emigrants, and one man is as much an American as another, if not more so, the negro excepted. A man named FELLOWS, who was a rebel Colonel, also made a speech at the close of the proceedings of the Convention, in which he claimed that the Fifteenth Amendment, if adopted, would not be binding on any State that rejected it, and such State might, could, would, and should refuse to obey it, even at the point of the bayonet. After FELLOWS' furious speech the Convention was sufficiently disgusted to adjourn, which it did about midnight with three faint cheers.

Proceedings of the Convention—Speech of Mr. S. J. Tilden—The Permanent Organization—The State Officers—The Platform.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 22.—The Democratic State Convention met at 12:30 o'clock in Wieting Hall. S. J. TILDEN called the Convention to order and made an address of considerable length, criticising the Administration of General GRANT, his journeyings about the country, the treatment of the South and the Fifteenth Amendment, and strongly condemning the proposition to make voters without regard to race or color. He claimed that the Democracy was always liberal with regard to the elective franchise, but it could not indorse this proposition. He then proceeded to defend the Democracy against the charge of illiberality. He congratulated the people upon the auspicious result of the two years' administration in our State by a Democratic State officer. Alluding to the canal improvements, he said that in the matter of transportation there had been a saving in that time of forty per cent, and twenty-five per cent in the cost; and this was simply by cleaning out the bottom of the canal, instead of going to the great expense of enlargement. Referring to the ticket to be nominated, he expressed confidence in its being triumphantly elected. He closed by nominating Hon. FERRIEL DENNENY, of Steuben, Chairman, which was carried. Messrs. CASSIDY and PIERCE conducted Mr. DENNENY to the chair. Mr. DENNENY then, after thanking the Convention for the honor conferred on him, referred to the importance of this Convention and said if true to themselves, they would redeem this country from its present wicked rule. There may be an honest difference existing among Democrats, but be counseled harmony as a means of securing triumph.

On motion, JAMES F. PIERCE, of Erie, and JOHN MCMANUS, of Kings, were made temporary secretaries.

The list of delegates was then called.

On motion, a committee of two from each Judicial District was ordered to select officers for the permanent organization. Mr. TILDEN here read a dispatch announcing that the condition of Hon. SANFORD E. CHURCH was no worse today, which was received with applause.

The following is the Committee on Permanent Organization:

First District—Samuel J. Tilden and Wm. M. Tweed, of New-York.
Second District—J. B. Frisbee, of Westchester, and Geo. G. Herman, of Kings.
Third District—V. E. Russell, of Ulster, and Moses Warren, of Rensselaer.
Fourth District—A. W. Hunter, of Schenectady, and D. Magone, Jr., of St. Lawrence.
Fifth District—Lorenzo Carrj, of Herkimer, and Andrew Cornwell, of Jefferson.
Sixth District—John Murdock, of Chemung, and Roswell Curtis, of Chenango.
Seventh District—A. L. Underhill, of Steuben, and Calias Foster, of Wayne.
Eighth District—A. J. Gleason, of Genesee, and John Ransom, of Wyoming.

The Committee on Resolutions was then announced as follows:

First District—A. Oakey Hall, New-York; Richard O'Gorman, New-York.
Second District—James B. Craig, Kings; Jas. B. Pearsall, Queens.
Third District—William Cassidy, Albany; Chas. Holmes, Schoharie.
Fourth District—A. P. Hawley, Saratoga; Christopher F. Norton, Clinton.
Fifth District—Francis Kernan, Oneida; Wm. A. Beach, Onondaga.
Sixth District—D. B. Jones, Cortland; W. W. Gordon, Delaware.
Seventh District—William Purcell, Monroe; John L. Lewis, Yates.
Eighth District—George M. Coppland, Orleans; Jesse K. Butler, Cattaraugus.

The Committee on Resolutions was then announced, and the Convention took a recess till 3 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Committee on Permanent Organization reported as follows:

For President—ALLEN C. BEACH.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENTS:

First District—George Law, W. M. Tweed.
Second District—Edward Dewitt, McFarland.
Third District—James Fonda, J. H. Glute.
Fourth District—McIntyre Frazier, David Barrett.
Fifth District—A. S. Paige, John A. Clark.
Sixth District—Calvin Morse, George S. Ward.
Seventh District—M. B. Slade, Joseph Lewis.
Eighth District—Wm. Samway, Philip Church.

FOR SECRETARIES:

First District—C. M. Clancy.
Second District—James F. Pierce.
Third District—J. Deas.
Fourth District—E. R. Ellsworth.
Fifth District—Miles B. Fargo.
Sixth District—H. R. Williams.
Seventh District—T. H. Houghtaling.
Eighth District—John McManus.

Mr. Beach, on taking the Chair, addressed the Convention, thanking it for the honor conferred upon him, and then proceeded to say that we had evidence that the Republican Party was unable to administer the Government. They had subordinated the civil Government to the military. By their odious banking laws they had enriched the banker and impoverished the farmer and the poor man. The people had become disgusted with their management, which was for the benefit of the rich. Our citizens of foreign birth would not support a party which administered government in the manner in which it was administered in the lands they had left. State after State was leaving that party, and now this State must fall into line and bring peace and prosperity to the land.

Mr. Cassidy, from the Committee on Resolutions, announced that the Committee on Resolutions would not be ready to report until after the recess, as there was a difference of opinion in the Committee.

A motion was made to nominate candidates for the Court of Appeals.

Mr. Lewis, of Yates, was opposed to selecting the Judges first; it was contrary to the precedent of Democratic Conventions.

Mr. Kernan expressed similar views, and urged that the State officers be nominated first.

The motion of Mr. Lewis was lost.

A motion to proceed to the nomination of Secretary of State was then carried.

Mr. Cassidy, of Albany, named Homer A. Nelson, the present incumbent. Carried by acclamation.

On motion of Mr. Murphy, of Kings, Wm. F. Allen was renominated for Comptroller in the same way.

Marshall B. Champlain was renominated for Attorney-General in the same way.

Wheeler H. Bristol was renominated State Treasurer in the same way.

Van R. Richmond was renominated State Engineer and Surveyor in the same way.

Mr. Wells, of Ontario, nominated Mr. Wright for Canal Commissioner.

Mr. Faulkner, of Livingston, seconded the nomination in a brief and enthusiastic address.

Mr. Wilcoxen nominated George B. Daniels, of Seneca County.

Mr. Gulick announced that he was instructed to withdraw Mr. Daniels' name, and he moved the nomination of Mr. Wright by acclamation, which was carried.

The following gentlemen were informally named for the office of State Prison Inspector: Thomas Kearney, of Albany; F. Laughlin, of Utica; Jabez Stevens, of Oneida; George W. Millspaugh, of Oneida; Robie S. Biderkin, of St. Lawrence; Mr. Cobb, of Westchester; and John McShea, of Schenectady.

Mr. Hardenburg, of Ulster, at some length, presented the claims of Ulster County for the office, and strongly urged the nomination of Mr. Laflin. He denied that the nomination belonged to the interior or western part of the State; it belonged to the river counties—to Kings or Albany, even. Ulster County had always given a Democratic majority, but had never had a place on the State ticket. Oneida County, he said, was about to ask a place on the ticket for a higher office, and Kings County also; and, therefore, the nomination ought not to come from those counties.

The name of Mr. Russell, of Washington, was then announced, and the Convention proceeded to vote viva voce informally.

Mr. Kearney received 72 votes; Mr. Laflin, 38; Mr. Stevens, 30; Mr. Millspaugh, 6; Mr. McShea, 10; Mr. Cobb, 9; Mr. Russell, 15; Mr. Elderkin, 5—no choice.

Another vote was had, with this result: Kearney, 47; Laflin, 42; Stevens, 32; Russell, 11; McShea, 7; Cobb, 9. No choice.

Another vote was then put, confined to the three highest candidates, as follows: Kearney, 40; Laflin, 32; Stevens, 34. No choice.

Another vote was had, with this result: Kearney, 39; Laflin, 40; Stevens, 29. No choice.

Another vote was had, confined to the two highest candidates, with this result: Laflin, 77; Kearney, 49.

Mr. Niver, of Albany, moved to make the nomination of Mr. Laflin unanimous. Carried.

General Slocum moved the nomination of Hon. John A. Lott for the Court of Appeals, long term.

Mr. Kernan, of Oneida, seconded the nomination with great pleasure, because Mr. Lott came up to the standard of what the Democracy demand in a Judge, and he would move that the nomination be made unanimous, unless any one wished to name some one else. Carried.

The names of Hon. Samuel L. Selden, Hon. F. W. Hubbard and Hon. A. C. Hand were presented for Judge of the Court of Appeals, short term.

Mr. Kernan, of Oneida, in a few eulogistic remarks, named Robert Earl, of Herkimer.

Mr. Carlisle seconded the nomination, indorsing Mr. Earl's qualifications.

Hiram Gray, of Chemung, was named by Mr. Murdock, who strongly urged his nomination.

Mr. Dinimy spoke in favor of Judge Gray's nomination, referring to his conceded ability and uprightness.

Mr. Conger spoke in favor of Judge Selden.

The Convention then proceeded to vote, with this result: Hand, 27; Gray, 35; Earl, 42; Hubbard, 2; Selden, 15. No choice.

Another vote was had, confined to the three highest candidates, with the following result: Earl, 45; Gray, 41; Hand, 31. No choice.

Another vote was then had, which resulted as follows: Earl, 62; Gray, 34.

Judge Earl's nomination was made unanimous.

Mr. Tilden moved that the State Committee consist of two delegates from each Judicial District, selected by the delegates from each district, and three from the State at large, to be appointed by the President.

The Convention then took a recess till 8 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

The following members of the State Central Committee were named:

First District—Peter B. Sweeney, Charles G. Cornell.
Second District—Wm. A. Fowler, Erastus Ide.
Third District—Isaac McCombie, Wm. Cassidy.
Fourth District—Isaac Blood, N. R. Knapp.
Fifth District—John W. Barker, George H. Sanford.
Sixth District—S. T. Arnot, N. Wilson Parker.
Seventh District—C. C. B. Walker, George W. Cuyler.
Eighth District—Henry A. Richmond, James Jackson, Jr.

Members from the State at large—S. J. Tilden of New-York, Samuel North of Oswego, and Joseph Warren of Erie.

Mr. CASSIDY, from the Committee on Resolutions, reported the following:

The Democracy of New-York, in convention assembled, report and reaffirm the pledges they have given to the people in regard to questions of public policy, and they point to the history of their connection with the Government, from the day of its foundation, for the record of their devotion to the interests, their fidelity to its honor, their nationality and patriotism and their unswerving loyalty to the Constitution; that as the party which derives its principles from JEFFERSON and JACKSON, we are ready to go before the country with the record of our conduct and our principles, and demand to be judged by them.

Resolved, That in pursuance of these principles and faithful to these traditions, we demand the restoration of all States to their rights in the Union under the Constitution; the supremacy of political officers; the subordination of the standing army; the abolition of that hybrid institution, the Freedmen's Bureau; the reestablishment of the rightful authority of the Judiciary, and the subordination of the military to the civil power.

Resolved, That we arraign the Administration of President GRANT as false to these principles and measures, and to its pledges to give the country peace. It has, for partisan purposes, prolonged the dissension of the States, and, by military dictation and arbitrary legislation, is endeavoring to coerce communities and States into assent to its measures; it has failed to protect the masses, and has given countenance and support to class interests, and turning its back upon the people, has become, in turn, the pensioner and parasite of accumulated wealth; and that while thus abusing the standard of administration at home, it has lowered the tone of our diplomacy abroad by the character of its appointments, by its vacillations and hesitations in regard to our rights as a nation, its want of sympathy with the people struggling for liberty, and its indifference to the fate of American citizens, victims of foreign despotism.

Resolved, That the protection of American citizens, whether naturalized or native-born, in all their rights and wherever they may go, is a sacred duty imposed upon the United States Government which cannot be disregarded without incurring national dishonor; that protection and allegiance are reciprocal duties, and whenever or wherever the rights of American citizens are assailed, duty and honor require that the Government should promptly employ adequate means for the vindication of such rights; and that we therefore denounce the recent disregard manifested by the Federal Administration, to put form its whole duty toward American citizens in Great Britain and Cuba.

Resolved, That the Democratic Party is now as it always has been, in favor of the fulfillment of all legitimate contracts made by the Federal Government with the same strictness and honesty that should attend the fulfillment of contracts between man and man; that in case of loans made to the Federal Government by authority of law, it is the right not only of the lender, but of the American people, from the fruits of whose labor such loans must be paid, that such obligations should be discharged when due in the manner provided for by the law, in obedience to which they were created.

Resolved, That the multiplication of taxes, their complexity and uncertainty, and the inquisitorial means by which they are extorted from the people, and will, more, that unequal and unjust system by which a portion of the people are declared exempt from the burdens of State and municipal Government, and their share imposed upon their neighbors, is a gross and constantly increasing abuse; that it is the duty of the statesmen of the Republic, to simplify our taxes, distribute them upon the property of the country, reduce the tariff to a revenue basis, and thus release industry from its heaviest burden, and give freedom to commerce.

Resolved, That the course of the Executive and Administrative officers of this State, in enforcing economy and reforming abuses which have grown up under the fostering care of our political opponents, commends itself to the approval of the people, and should be extended to all the departments of the Government; that the Registration and Excise laws are to be imposed on the people, they should at least be uniform in their operation throughout the State; that the canals of the State should remain the property of its citizens; that they should be improved by the enlargement of the channels and the doubling of locks where necessary; that the tolls should be reduced to such an extent as to command the carrying trade, and that as soon as the existing canal debt now in process of rapid liquidation shall be paid the canals should be opened to the navigation of the people of all the States, subject only to a charge to defray the cost of their annual maintenance and repair.

Resolved, That the Fifteenth Amendment of the Modern Constitution, proposed by the radical majority in Congress in the spirit of contempt of the people and of the right of the States to regulate the elective franchise, and in utter disregard of the pledges of the party, and attempted to be forced upon the States as a condition of their restoration to civil government and to their representation in the National Legislature, is intended to place the question of suffrage in the hands of the central powers, and by debasing to demoralize the representative system.

Resolved, That the amended Constitution of this State is in various schedules to be submitted to the electors, we commend itself to the favor of the Democrats of the State, either by the motives in which it was conceived or by the manner in which it is presented, or by its intrinsic worth.

Resolved, That His Excellency, Hon. JOHN T. HOFFMAN, by his fidelity to the interests of the State, his high-toned support of Democratic principles, his effective hostility to corrupt and special legislation, and the dignified and impartial manner in which he has discharged the Executive duties, has not only commanded the hearty approval of the Democracy of New-York, but secured their confidence and respect of a large class of our political opponents who hold the honor of the Empire State dearer than partisan success. Our citizens owe it to themselves as well as to Governor HOFFMAN, to elect a Governor who will aid rather than thwart him in carrying into effect measures of administrative and legislative reform.

Resolved, That the State officers this day renominated command the confidence of the Democracy, and we cordially and as unanimous as they have the nomination of the Convention, and that to them and their colleagues on the ticket we pledge a united and enthusiastic and triumphant support.

The resolutions were adopted without debate or dissent.

RICHARD O'GORMAN was then called upon, and addressed the Convention at some length, elucidating the various topics embraced in the resolutions.

Mr. FELLOWS was next called upon and responded, also indorsing the ticket.

At the conclusion of Mr. FELLOWS' address, the Convention adjourned.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Opening of the Convention—Permanent Organization—Mr. Sumner's Speech—Renomination of the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor—The Platform.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 22.—The Massachusetts Republican State Convention met at 11:15 A. M., and after the reading of the call, Mr. A. D. BRIGGS, of Springfield, was elected temporary Chairman. He made a few remarks on taking the chair, and on their conclusion, Committees on Credentials, Permanent Organization and Resolutions were appointed. The Convention then voted to submit all resolutions to the proper committee without debate, and after a brief discussion on the introduction of a temperance resolution, the Committee on Permanent Organization made their report. Hon. CHARLES SUMNER was named as President, with a Vice-President for each county, about fifty at large, and several Secretaries.

The announcement of Mr. SUMNER's name as the presiding officer was received with great applause, and while the delegates joined in honoring him with three cheers he was conducted to the platform by Hon. GERRY TWISSELL and Mr. W. B. SPOONER. At this point Hon. F. W. BIRD, of Walpole, introduced Mr. JOHN BERRY TORR, of England, and moved that he be invited to a seat on the platform. After putting the motion, which was carried, Mr. SUMNER said: "In inviting Mr. TORR to take a seat here, I desire to say that I know him as a friend of JOHN BRIGHT, [applause,] and I know I speak the voice of the Republicans of Massachusetts when I say ANY friend of JOHN BRIGHT will always be welcome on their platform." The officers of the Convention having taken their seats and quiet having been secured, Mr. SUMNER proceeded to deliver the following address:

SPEECH OF SENATOR SUMNER.

FELLOW-CITIZENS OF MASSACHUSETTS: While thanking you for the honor conferred upon me, I make haste to say that, in my judgment, Massachusetts has one duty at the coming election to which all local interests and questions must be postponed, as on its just performance all else depends; and this commanding duty is to keep the Commonwealth now, as aforetime, an example to our country and a bulwark of human rights. Such was Massachusetts in these earlier days, when, on the confusion of Europe, the name of "Bostonians" was given to the American people in arms against the mother country, making this designation embrace all, and when, in the British Parliament, the great orator, EDMUND BURKE, exclaimed: "The cause of Boston is the concern of all America; every part of America is united in support of Boston; Boston is the Lord Mayor of America." I quote these words from the Parliamentary debates of the time. But Boston was at that time Massachusetts, and it was her stand for liberty that made her name the synonym for all. And permit me to add that in accepting a presiding officer, entirely removed from local interests, I had assurance of your readiness to unite with me in that national cause which concerns not Massachusetts only, but every part of America, and concerns also our place and name as a nation. The enemy here in Massachusetts would be glad to divert attention from the unreasonable principles of the Republican Party; they would be glad to make you forget that support we owe to the Administration and to the measures of reconstruction, and above all, our deep interest in that essential safeguard not yet completely established for the national freedman and the national creditor. These they would hand over to oblivion, hoping on some local issue to divide our forces, or perhaps obtain power to be wielded against the national cause. Massachusetts cannot afford to occupy any uncertain position. Therefore, I begin by asking you to think of your country and its national affairs at home and abroad.

SECURITY FOR THE FUTURE.

It is now four years since I had the honor of presiding at our annual Convention, and I do not forget how at that time I endeavored to remind you of this same national cause then in fearful peril. The war of armies was ended; no longer were fellow-citizens arrayed against fellow-citizens; on each side the trumpet was silent, the banner furled. But the defection of ANDREW JOHNSON had then begun; and out of that defection the rebellion assumed new life, with new purposes and new hopes. If it did not spring forth once more fully armed, it did spring forth filled with hate and diabolism toward all who loved the Union, whether white or black. There were exceptions, I know; but they were not enough to change the result. And straightway the new apparition, seeming in connection with the Northern Democracy, aboriginal allies of the rebellion, planned the capture of the National Government. Its representatives came up to Washington. Then was the time for a few decisive words. There should have been admonished frankly and kindly to return home, there to plant, sow, reap, buy, sell and be prosperous, but not to expect any place in the ownership of government until there was complete security for all. Instead of this they were sent back plotting how to obtain ascendency at home as the stepping-stone to ascendency in the nation. Such was the condition of things in the Autumn of 1866, when, sounding the alarm from this very platform, I insisted upon irrevocable guarantees against the rebellion, and especially for security to the national freedman and to national creditor. It was for security that I then insisted, believing that, though the war of arms was ended, this was a just object of national care, all this being contained in the famous postulate, security for the future, without which peace is no better than armistice.

To that security one thing is needed, simply this: All men must be safe in their rights, so that, whether in government or business, shall have a free and equal course. But there are two special classes still in jeopardy, as in the Autumn of 1866—the national freedman and the national creditor; and behind these the faithful Unionists in the ex-rebel States, now suffering terribly from the growing reaction.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

For the protection of the national freedman a constitutional amendment has been presented for ratification, placing their right to vote under the perpetual safeguard of the Union; but I am obliged to remind you that this amendment has not yet obtained the requisite number of ratification; nor can I say surely when it will. The Democratic Party is arrayed against it, and the rebel Unionists unite with the Democracy. Naturally they go together. They are old cronies. Here let me say frankly that I have never ceased to regret—I do now most profoundly regret—that Congress in its plenary powers under the Constitution, especially in its great unquestionable power to guarantee a republican government in the State, did not summarily settle this whole question, so that it should no longer disturb the country. It was for Congress to give a definition of a republican government; nor need it go further than our own Declaration of Independence, where in a definition from which there is no appeal. There it is, as it came from our forefathers, in lofty self-evident proof, and Congress should have applied it. Or it might have spoken to the speech of ABRAHAM LINCOLN at Gettysburg, where again is the same great definition. There was also a decisive precedent. As Congress made a Civil Rights law, so should it have made a Political Rights law. In each case the power is identical. If it can be done in the one it can be done in the other. To my mind nothing is easier. Thus far Congress has thought otherwise. There remains, then, the slow process of constitutional amendment, to which the country must be rallied.

PUBLIC OPINION AND A SYMPATHETIC ADMINISTRATION.

But this is not enough. No mere text of Constitution or law is sufficient. Behind these there must be a prevailing public opinion and a sympathetic Administration. Both are needed. The Administration must reinforce public opinion, and public opinion must reinforce the Administration. Such is all experience. Without these the clearest text and most cunning in its requirements is only a phantom it may be of terror, as was the case with the Fugitive Slave bill; but not a living letter. It is not practically obeyed. Sometimes it is evaded; sometimes it is openly set at naught. And now it is my duty to warn you that the national freedman still needs our care, that the ex-rebel ancient master is already in the field conspiring against him. That traditional experience, that infinite audacity, that insensibility to human rights, which so long upheld slavery, are evoked anew. No longer able to hold him as slave, the ancient master would hold him as dependent and to keep him in his service, personal and political, thus substituting a new bondage for the old. Unhappily he finds at the North a political party which the rebellion has not taken from that unnatural Southern breast where it drew its primitive nutriment; and this political party now transforms into the dismal work by which peace is postponed; for until the national freedman is safe in his rights there can be no peace. You may call it peace; but I tell you it is not peace. It is peace only in name. Who does not feel that he treads still on smothered fires? Who does not feel his feet burn as he moves over the treacherous ashes? If I wished any new motive for opposition to the Democracy, I should find it in this hostile alliance. Because I am for peace, so that this whole people may be at work; because I desire tranquillity, so that all may be happy; because I seek reconciliation, so that there shall be completed harmony—for these I oppose the Democracy, and now denounce its alliance with the rebel of the national peace. The information from the ex-rebel States is most painful. Old rebels are crawling from hiding places to resume their former rule, and what a rule! Such as might be expected from the representatives of slavery. It is the rule of misrule, where the Ku-klux Klan takes the place of missionary and schoolmaster. Murder is unloosed. The national freedman is the victim, and so is the Unionist. Not one of these States, without intimidation with death in its train does not play its part. Take the whole Southern tier from Georgia to Texas, and add to it Tennessee, and, I fear, North Carolina and Virginia also—for the crime is contagious—and there is small justice for those to whom you owe so much. Such that these things should occur under ANDREW JOHNSON was natural; that reconstruction should encounter difficulties in this defection was natural. The great English moralist—another JOHNSON—did not wonder that a dog in chains danced no better, but that it danced at all; and I do not wonder that reconstruction with the chains upon it danced no better, but that it succeeded at all. ANDREW JOHNSON is now out of the way, and in his place is a patriot President. Public opinion must come to his support in this necessary work. There is but one thing these disturbers feel; it is power; and this they must be made to fear. I mean the power of an awakened people, directed by a Republican Administration, vigorously, constantly, surely, so that there shall be no rest for the wicked.

REPUDIATION.

If I could forget the course of the Democracy on this question, if I cannot, there is still another chapter for exposure, and it is more it is seen the worse it appears. It is that standing measure of repudiation, by which the national credit at home and abroad suffers so much, and our taxes are so largely increased. It will not do to say that no National Convention has yet announced this dishonesty. I charge it upon the party. A party which repudiates the fundamental principles of the Declaration of Independence—which repudiates equality before the law—which repudiates the self-evident truth that government is founded only on the consent of the governed, which repudiates what is most precious and good in our history—and whose chiefs are now engaged in cunning assault upon the national creditor—is a party of repudiation. This is its just designation. A Democrat is a repudiator. The repudiation gospel, according to Mr. PENDLETON, is now preaching in Ohio; and nothing is more certain than that the triumph of the Democracy in our country would be a blow not only at the national freedman, but also at the national creditor. There would be repudiation for each. The word "repudiation," in its present sense, is a word of first appearance in Mississippi, a Democratic State. If the thing were known before, never before did it assume the same hardihood of name. It was in that State a Mississippi Governor, in a message to the Legislature, used the word in regard to certain State bonds, and thus began that policy by which Mississippi was first dishonored, and then kept poor; for capital was naturally shy of such a State. Constantly, from that time, Mississippi has had "bad eminence" of this transaction; nor is the State more known as the home of JEFFERSON DAVIS than as the home of repudiation. Unhappily, the nation suffered also; and even now, as I understand, it is argued in Congress by our discredits, that, because Mississippi repudiated, the nation may repudiate also. If I refer to this example, it is because I would illustrate the mischief of the Democratic policy, and summon Mississippi to duty, saying, A Democratic party cannot afford to have its name associated with repudiation; nor can the nation, and the burden of national taxation is increased by the existence of a party which, in its present form, is arrayed against it, and which, in its pretension, would be its ruin. Let Mississippi, then, be a warning against the sentiment of repudiation. Let the Democrats of Massachusetts, who are now in the Legislature, be a warning against the Democratic Party, as France was flooded by assignats, and utterly destroying values of all kinds. Although in its present form repudiation is the gross and palpable form of repudiation, yet it has the same radical injustice. Interest-bearing bonds are to be paid with non-interest bearing bits of paper. The statement of the case is enough. Its proposition would never be the thing in his own affairs, but how can he ask his country to do what honesty forbids in private life?

TAXATION OF BONDS.

Another device is to tax the bonds, when the money was lent on the specific condition that the bonds should not be taxed. This, of course, is to break the contract in another way. It is repudiation in another form. To argue these propositions is happily unnecessary, and I allude to them only because I wish to exhibit the loss to the country from such attempts. This can be made plain as a church door. And here I must ask attention to details.

EXTRA INTEREST CAUSED BY SCHEMES OF REPUDIATION.

The total debt of our country on the 1st September, aside from the sixty millions of bonds issued to the Pacific Railway, was $2,475,000,000, and here I mention, with great satisfaction, that since the 1st March last the debt has been reduced $40,000,000. The surplus revenue now accruing is not less than $100,000,000 a year, and will be, probably, not less than $125,000,000 a year, of which large sum not less than $75,000,000 must be attributed to the better enforcement of the laws and the economy now prevailing in all departments. And here comes the practical point. Large as our surplus revenue, it should have been more, and would have been more but for the repudiation menaced by the Democracy. This can be shown easily. If we look at our bonded debt, we find it is now $2,107,000,000, upon which we pay not less than $134,000,000 in annual interest. The larger part at six per cent, the smaller at five per cent. Now, the difference between this interest and that paid by other Powers is the measure of our annual loss. English Three per cents and French Fours are firm in the market; but England and France have money to lend on reasonable resources that are ours; nor is either so secure in its government. It is easy to see that our debt could have been funded without paying more than four per cent, but for the doubt cast upon our credit by the dishonest schemes of repudiators. "Payment in greenbacks" and "taxation of bonds" are costly cries. Without them we would have been $40,000,000 to swell our surplus revenue. But this sum, if invested in a sinking fund at four per cent interest, would pay the whole bonded debt in less than thirty years. Such is our annual loss. The sum total of this loss directly chargeable upon the repudiators is more than one hundred millions, already paid in taxes; and much I fear, fellow-citizens, that before the nation can recover from the discredit inflicted upon it, another hundred millions will be paid in the same way. It is hard to see this immense treasure, wrung by taxation from the toil of the people, to pay these schemes of a dishonest Democracy. Do not forget that the cost of this experiment is confined to no particular class. Wherever the tax-gatherer goes there it is paid. Every workman pays it in his food and clothing; every mechanic and artisan in his tools; every housewife in her cooking stove and flatiron; every merchant in the stamp upon his note; every man of salary in the income tax; aye, even the poor man in his wood, his coal, his potatoes and his salt. Many of these taxes imposed under duress of war will be removed soon I trust; but still the enormous sum of $50,000,000 annually must be contributed by the labor of the country until the world is convinced that, in spite of Democratic menace, the Republic will maintain its plighted faith to the end. People wish to reduce taxation. I tell you how. Be honest. Let no doubt rest upon the public faith. Then will the present burdens from taxation grow small by degrees and beautifully less. It is the doubt which costs. It is with our country, as with an individual, the doubt obliges the payment of extra interest. To stop that extra interest we must keep faith.

ABSURDITY AND AGGRAVATION.

As we look at the origin of the greenback we shall find a new motive for fidelity. I do not speak of that patriotic character which commends the national debt; but of the financial principle on which the greenback was first issued. It came from the overruling exigencies of self-defence. The national existence depended upon money which could be had only through a forced loan. The greenback was the agency by which it was collected. The disloyal party resisted the passage of the original act, prophesying danger and difficulty. But the safety of the nation required the risk and the Republican Party ventured it. And now this same disloyal party, once against the greenback, insist upon continuing in peace what was justified only in war—insist upon a forced loan, when the overruling exigencies of self-defence have all ceased, and the nation is saved. To such absurdity is this party now driven. The case is aggravated when we consider the boundless resources of the country, which, if used in a short time even this great debt will be lightened, if the pretext of repudiation are silenced. Peace, security as well as politically, is needed. Let us have peace. Nowhere will it be felt more than at the South, which is awakening to a consciousness of results unknown while slavery ruled. With these constable additions to the national capital five years cannot pass without a sensible diminution of our burdens. A rate of taxation per capita, equal to only one-half that of 1868, will pay even our present interest, all present expenses, and the entire principal, in less than twenty years. But to this end we must keep faith.

REPUDIATION IMPOSSIBLE.

The attempt is aggravated still further, when it is considered that repudiation is impossible. Try as you may, you cannot succeed. You may cause incalculable distress and postpone the reign of peace, but you cannot do this thing. The national debt must be paid, be repudiated. It will be paid, dollar for dollar, in coin, with interest to the end. How little do those who thus know the mighty resisting power which they encounter! How little the mighty crash which they invite. It will undertake to move Mount Washington from its immovable base, or shut out the ever-present ocean from our coasts. It is needless to say that the crash would be in proportion to the mass affected, being nothing less than the whole business of the country. Now, it appears from the gigantic making at this moment by Commissioner WELLS, whose labors shed such light on our financial questions, that our annual product reaches the sum of seven thousand millions of dollars. But this enormous amount depends for its value upon exchange, which in turn depends upon credit. Destroy exchange, and even these immense resources would be an infinite chaos, without form and void. Employment would cease, capital would waste, mills would stop, the rich would become poor, the poor, if fear, would starve. Savings banks, trust companies, would be complete wrecks. Disorder would be the mighty crash; but here you see also the mighty resisting power. Therefore, again do I say, repudiation is impossible. Mr. SOUTHWELL is criticised by the Democracy because he pays up bonds, paying the current market rates, which he should pay the face in greenbacks. Very well. Support the Secretary, yielding to these wise suggestions, should anyone hint a purpose to fatten the $2,000,000,000 of five-twenties, paying the face in greenbacks. What then? "After us the deluge," said the French King; and so, after such notice from our Secretary, would our deluge come. At once the contract bonded debt would be followed by greenbacks. The greenback would not be raised; the bond would be drawn down. On the present case of $2,000,000,000 the saving would amount to $80,000,000; but the bondholders would pass the difference between present rates and par, being twenty per cent, or $1,600,000,000. All this at once. But who can measure the consequences? Bonds would be thrown upon the market. From all points of the compass, at home and abroad, they would come. Business would be disorganized. The fountains of the great deep would be broken up and the deluge would be upon us.

NATIONAL BANKS.

Among the practical agencies to which the country owes much already, are the national banks. They cannot fail to be taken into account in all financial discussions. As they have done good where they are now established, I would gladly see them extended, especially at the South and West, where they are much needed, and where abundant crops already supply the capital. But this can be done only by removing the currency limitation in the existing Bank act. Here I should like the condition that for every bank note issued a greenback should be retired, thus substituting the bank note for the greenback. In this way our greenbacks would be reduced in volume, while the demand for currency would be supplied by the banks. This would be an important stage toward specie payments, which I am unwilling to see postponed, while the national banks in all parts of the land, and founded on the bonds of the United States, would be a new security for a national credit.

PUBLIC FAITH.

Thus, fellow-citizens, at every turn are we brought back to one single point, the public faith, which cannot be dishonored without infinite calamity. The child is told not to tell a lie; but this injunction is the same for the full-grown man, and for the nation also. We cannot tell a lie to the national freedman or to the national creditor; we cannot tell a lie to anybody. That word of shame cannot be ours. But falsehood to the national freedman and the national creditor is a national lie. Breaking promise with either, you are dishonored, and liar must be stamped upon the national forehead. Beyond the ignominy which all of us must bear will be the influence of such a transgression in discrediting a republican government, and the very idea of a Republic. For weal or woe, we are an example. Mankind is now looking to us, and just in proportion to the confidence we have reached is the influence of our example. Already we have shown how a Republic can conquer in arms, offering millions of citizens and untold treasure and blood. It remains for us to show how a Republic can conquer in a field more glorious that battle, where all these millions of citizens and all this untold treasure uphold the public faith. Such an example will elevate republican government, and make the idea of a Republic more then ever great and splendid. Helping here, you help not only your own country, but you help humanity also; you help liberal institutions in all lands; you help the downtrodden everywhere, and all who struggle against the wrong and tyranny of earth. The brilliant Frenchman, Monnequinx, in that remarkable work which occupied so much attention during the last century, the Spirit of Laws, pronounces honor the animating sentiment of royalty; but virtue the animating sentiment of a Republic. It is for us to show that he was right; nor can we depart from this rule of virtue without disturbing the order of the universe. Faith is nothing less than a part of that sublime harmony by which the planets wheel surely in their appointed orbits, and nations are summoned to justice. Nothing too lofty for its power; nothing too lowly for its protection. It is an essential principle in that divine Cosmos, without which all is confusion. All depends upon faith. Why do you build? Because you have faith in those laws by which you are accounted to reason and property. Why do you plant? Why do you sow? Because you have faith in the returning seasons, faith in the generous skies, faith in the sun. But faith in this Republic must be fixed as the sun, which illuminates all. I cannot be content with less. Full well I see that every departure from this great law is only to be certain, and from the height we have reached, the fall will be in proportion to that of the ancient God from the battlements of Heaven:

"From morn
To noon he fell; from noon to dewy eve,
A Summer's day; and with the setting sun

It only remains that we should do all that we can to preserve this public faith. For myself, I see nothing more practical at this moment than, first, at all points to oppose the Democracy; and, secondly, to insist that yet a while longer our rebels shall be excused from copartnership in dependence against her own rebellious efforts—how at this moment England is preparing to release her northern colonies from their condition of dependence; and recalling these examples, it will be proper for her to consider if they do not illustrate a tendency of all coasts of Cuba remain more than ever open to the expeditions of men, arms and munitions, which are sent to the insurrectionists by agents who work with untiring activity in the neighboring main. We suppose that the Government and our representative in Washington will by this time have made the proper remonstrances to have this unjust embargo raised, but if unfortunately which we do not believe, our reclamation should prove unsuccessful, it is necessary that remembering what we were, we shall place ourselves in an energetic attitude and give those who treat us in this paltry manner, to understand that if this course is continued we will fight them, for to a man we are agreed on this question.

In which we shall not want allies, and in which we give our enemies trouble by challenging the privateers that will carry on their commerce. But the Government of the United States is just, and has an interest in the pacification of the Island of Cuba. Let us be firm in our remonstrances, and they will produce the favorable result to which we aspire. Another thing to which we should call the attention of the Government is the proximity of the crops. If what is stated in the extract from the letter we have given respecting the concentration of the colored people, and Asiatics in the insalubrious and inexplicable swamps of Zapata and Cochinos should prove to be correct, it will be easy for them to make flying visits to the small fruitful centres of the sugar production, and destroy, in a few days, by incendiarism, the most productive property of the Island of Cuba. Although all that our friend says may not be quite true, it is highly probable that the insurrectionists will do all they can to destroy these estates, for by so doing they would be depriving the Spaniards of the resources they count to be able to resist them; and do sad experience teaches us they are not scrupulous in the choice of means to carry on the war. Keeping in view the fact that the sugar has produced in the present year nearly sixty millions of dollars, and that the export duties on sugar are one of the principal sources of revenue out which we depend to sustain the war, the importance of preserving the crop from destruction is self-evident.

Other letters tell us that the rebels are making incessant efforts to get the Vuelta de Abajo also to rebel, and should these efforts prove successful we shall find ourselves deprived of the tobacco crop, which is, next to sugar, the most productive article of the Island of Cuba. It is unnecessary that we should continue to dwell on the danger now being incurred there. We have said sufficient to convince every one that we should make a supreme effort, and employ every possible means to assemble in Cuba with the greatest promptitude an army which will not only finish the insurrection, but proclaim to their friends and enemies that we are disposed to defend the Island at all cost."

The foregoing extract from the Epoca went the rounds of the journals on Monday, some commenting upon it and urging prompt measures on the part of the Government, others merely copying it without remark. The result was, that by mid-day on Monday every man was asking his neighbor, Can these tidings be true? and the excitement became intense. At 10 o'clock on Monday night, as soon as the Epoca and Correspondencia, which are evening papers, came out, there was a rush to buy them to see if they contained any fresh news. The latter was silent, but the Epoca had an article more startling than the one just quoted, and which has set all Madrid in an uproar. Its importance and possible historical interest tempt me to translate it literally for your readers. Most of yesterday (Tuesday) morning's papers reproduced it, some with the addition of comments of extreme severity on the United States Government for its presumption and alleged violation, or intended violation, of the Neutrality laws.

"News of deep gravity," says the Epoca, "have arrived to inflict sorrow on Spanish hearts. It is said that the representative of the United States, General SICKLES, whose presence has been of gloomy omen for the interests of our country, has handed, in compliance with the orders of his Government, a note to ours, in which he announces that the place of opinion in the North American Republic will probably oblige it to recognize the rebels of Cuba as belligerents! Something more the dispatch says, of which we ought not to make mention, for it does not come to us with the same certainty as the foregoing statement. The Ministers who have remained in Madrid have not come to any decision upon the matter, that we can hear of, and have confined themselves to giving information of the dispatch to Señores PRIM and SILVELA and to our representatives abroad. When we wrote yesterday, under a most painful impression, our hearts trembled lest what we might write was even greater evils. Cuba in danger! To this cry we ought not to answer with dismay, but with the spirited enthusiasm of better times. Cuba in danger! To save this beautiful portion of the Spanish possessions, the whole of our army ought to be at once transferred to those shores, and thus present a magnanimous exhibition of the energy and vitality of our country. If there be Carlists, if there be Republicans, if there be Isabellines, if there be any other party who cherish the idea of combatting the present situation in Spain by force, malcontents will descend upon their heads if, at the moment it is indispensable to unite all our efforts, they do not forget their hatreds and grievances, to leave the Government the ability to save Cuba. The revolution has conceded the right of public meeting. What more fitting occasion could be found to exercise it than the present moment, when it is necessary to demonstrate to that great Republic, where public opinion is everything, that Spain has but one will when the salvation of the integrity of her territory is concerned? Let the men of all parties meet, in every city, every town, every village. The loss of Cuba will be the dishonor of the revolution. In the salvation of Cuba all our political parties are equally interested."

When the foregoing article got circulated yesterday morning the popular excitement was more intense than I can describe, and it still continues at fever heat. PRIM is still at Vichy, and so is Señor SILVELA, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, and I suppose they will come back post haste. Next week 4,000 troops are to take their departure for Cuba, and the week after 4,000 more.

I have reason to believe General SICKLES' communication to the Spanish Government is by no means an abrupt threat to grant belligerent rights to the Cubans, but is a well-timed and energetic protest, not only in the name of the United States, but also in the name of common humanity, against the manner in which the war is being conducted in the island; and against the atrocities, the barbarities and unjust acts of violence with which the American accounts from there have teemed for so long a period. It is accompanied by a gentle hint that if Spain cannot conduct this war in a manner more conformable to the usages of civilized nations, the United States Government, in its own name and that of common humanity, may find it incumbent upon it to recognize the Cubans as belligerents. Our Minister offers other recommendations which it would be well for Spain to listen to, but to which she will of course turn a deaf ear. Thus matters stand at present. The papers call on the Government to publish the dispatch of General SICKLES, but they refuse. The Cortes meet on the 1st of October, so it will not be long before the whole of the Government policy in regard to Cuba will be laid bare and thoroughly exposed.

SPAIN AND AMERICA

American Wisdom and Spanish Folly.

From the London Times, (City Article,) Sept. 10.

It would seem hardly credible that the American Government can contemplate the recognition of the Cuban insurgents, considering the confusion into which the prospect of a war with Spain would throw their commerce and finances, while Spain herself could have little to lose beyond the island, which she herself admits she must ultimately consent to abandon. On the other hand, whatever difficulties may arise, the folly of Spain will stand out as something unparalleled in the history of nations. Although a "categorical denial" was given to the statement at its time, it is well known to certain leading American capitalists and politicians, as well as to more than one Spanish statesman, that an authorized proposal was submitted from Washington two months ago for the recognition of the independence of the island, on the basis of a payment being made to Spain of 21,000,000 sterling in bonds indorsed by the United States.

AMERICAN STOCKS

From the London Times, (City Article,) Sept. 10.

If confidence once utterly broken could be restored by new protestations, or by anything less than long years of amendment, certain representations that are now being circulated with regard to the notorious Erie Railway might, perhaps, raise a gleam of hope among the defrauded shareholders. But, like people in the hands of outlaws, they have come to the conclusion that it is useless to look for terms, and that if a new promise were made to them, there is no reason why, like those that have been made before, it should not be broken the moment it had served its purpose. The lesson has now been thoroughly learnt by the European public that in the State of New-York there is not a shadow of legal protection for investors in any of its securities, and that if in any given case the holders are not plundered of every dollar it is simply because in the specific instance the managers or directors happen to be persons who have a sense of distinction between their own property and the property of others. As regards the Erie Line, it has been frequently alleged that there was a time by which the foreign holders might bring their case before the Supreme Court of the United States with some hope of redress, but experience seems to show that this is practically a fiction, since efforts have unquestionably been made in that direction by sufferers who can get no tidings of any prospect of success. A libel suit, brought by some of the Erie managers against the New-York Times, was believed at one period to be likely to have the effect of bringing about, at all events, a full exposure by subjecting the complainants to the perils of a cross-examination upon oath; but even this process has been evaded, or at least drawn out or to have been indefinitely postponed, while at the same time, from evidence lately adduced, there is room to doubt whether any development of mendacity, provided it could be shown to have been financially successful, would draw forth any material sympathy of indignation on the part of the Wall-street public. Hence it is plain that if the European shareholders in the Erie Railway ever receive a dividend, or recover a dollar of their property, it will come in the shape of a voluntary act of grace from the parties who had their property in unlimited control. Under the circumstances, the reformers may, we affect, however improbable may be their faithfulness, are therefore, perhaps, the best that could be circulated. Any statement of the prospect of legal justice would deserve to be treated merely as a worn-out delusion. Perhaps an instance of intended amendment on the part of the Erie people is almost equally worthless, but we know that if they choose, in a fit of liberality, to throw something to the shareholders, they have the power to do so, whereas, as far as the law is concerned, we know of no means they have of compelling them to do anything whatever. Accordingly, it is satisfactory to be told that the Erie managers, having effected a consolidation of the Atlantic and Great Western, and also the Lake Shore lines, with their own system, and thus obtained the command of an entire and first-rate western route, are about to put forth next month a report which will develop the advantages gained, and also the financial condition of the concern as it will stand at that date, and the course to be pursued for the future, one result being that they will then be restored to an official position on the New-York Stock Board. At the same time, even assuming all these representations to be well founded, the English public must not lose sight of the contingency that any succeeding mail may bring the news that Commodore VANDERBILT, or Mr. DANIEL DREW, or some other veteran operator to whom the new arrangements may be distasteful, has commanded the New-York Legislature or the New-York Courts to set it aside in order that the property may again be torn up and appropriated for the benefit of rival combinations.

THE SENATUS CONSULTUM.

Official Text of the Decree.

From the Journal Officiel.

[Extract from the Minutes of the Senate.]

SENATUS CONSULTUM.

We have sanctioned and sanction, and have promulgated and do promulgate, as follows:

NAPOLEON, by the grace of God and the national will Emperor of the French, to all whom these presents may come, greeting.

ARTICLE 1. The Emperor and the Legislative Body have the initiation of laws.

ART. 2. Ministers depend only on the Emperor; they deliberate in council under his Presidency; they are responsible; they cannot be impeached but by the Senate.

ART. 3. Ministers may be members of the Senate or of the Legislative Body; they have the right of entrée in either assembly, and the right of speech whenever they demand it.

ART. 4. The sittings of the Senate are public; the demand of five members is sufficient to constitute a secret session.

ART. 5. The Senate may, while pointing out the modifications of which a law appears to it to be susceptible, provide that it shall be remitted for further consideration to the Legislative Body. It may, in any case, propose the promulgation of the law, and the law to the promulgation of which the Senate is opposed cannot be presented again to the Legislative Body during the same session.

ART. 6. At the opening of each session, the Legislative Body names its President, Vice-President and Secretaries. It also names its Questors.

ART. 7. Every member of the Senate or the Legislative Body has the right of addressing an interpellation to the Government. Orders of the day, with reason assigned, may be adopted. The reference to the bureaus of which orders of the day is a matter of right, when demanded by the Government. The bureaus will name a commission, on whose report the Assembly will decide.

ART. 8. No amendment can be taken into consideration unless it has been sent to the Commission charged to consider the profit de loi, and communicated to the Government. When the Government and the Commission cannot agree, the Council of State shall pronounce its opinion, and the Legislative Body shall decide.

ART. 9. The budget of expenditure is presented to the Legislative Body in chapters and articles. The budget of each Ministry is voted chapter by chapter, agreeably to the schedule annexed to the projected Senatus Consultum.

ART. 10. The modifications which may in future be made in the tariffs of customs or of postage by international treaties shall be binding only in virtue of a law.

ART. 11. The constitutional relations at present established between the Government of the Emperor, the Senate and the Legislative Body can be modified only by a Senatus Consultum. The formal relations between these powers are established by Imperial decree. The Senate and the Legislative Body make their own internal regulations.

ART. 12. All dispositions contrary to the present Senatus Consultum are abrogated, especially articles 3 and 13, the second paragraph of article 24, articles 26 and 40, the fifth paragraph of article 42, the first paragraph of article 43, article 44 of the Constitution; Articles 3 and 5 of the Senatus Consultum of the 25th December, 1852, article 1 of the Senatus Consultum 31st December, 1861.

E. ROUHER, President.

PRINCE NAPOLEON.

Sympathy of American Citizens.

From the Morning Star, Sept. 19.

A meeting of Americans was held on the 4th inst. at the Langham Hotel, at which were present Hon. W. Douglas, of Philadelphia; Dr. E. Ford and Charles G. Howard, of Boston; Colonel Berton, H. De Paul, Captain Halpin, J. Seaton and A. Lewis, of New-York; P. Dwyer and W. Kaufman, of Chicago; F. Blanchard, of New-Orleans; and A. Monquin, of San Francisco. Colonel BERTON was elected Chairman, and H. De PAUL and Captain HALPIN Secretaries. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, All free nations, and above all America, are most interested in the success of the peaceful transformation now going on in France from a personal to a more popular form of government;

Whereas, Prince NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, as the First Prince of the Imperial blood of France, and as the first citizen of his country, has, notwithstanding the difficulties of his most exalted and delicate position, nobly and fearlessly defended, in his late manly and eloquent speech before the French Senate, the cause of freedom, and claimed for the French people the full restoration of their rights as citizens;

Whereas, Such a courageous act, under the present circumstances, reminds us of Prince Napoleon's visit during his visit to America in 1861, shortly after the bombardment of Fort Sumter, and in the beginning of our civil war, frankly expressed his sympathy for the cause of the North, by saluting the triumph of the flag which carried in its folds the abolition of slavery and the restoration of the most democratic and best Government in the world; who later strongly opposed the French intervention in Mexico, and who has since joined the faithful advocates of Italian unity and the courageous champion of peoples' rights; be it therefore,

Resolved, That we, citizens of the United States of America, and in the name of our fellow-citizens, do hereby respectfully tender to Prince NAPOLEON our most heartfelt congratulations for his late manly speech before the French Senate, especially for that passage in it which refers to the superior advantages of the democratic form of government in the United States.

Resolved, That we, on this occasion, and through Prince NAPOLEON, send to France, the most ancient ally and friend of America, our best wishes for the gradual and peaceful restoration of her liberties, and for the early resumption of her rank among the freest nations of the world.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to Prince NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, and be forwarded to the leading French, English and American newspapers.

After the reading of the above, and their adoption, cheers were called and most enthusiastically given for Prince NAPOLEON, JOHN BRIGHT, CHAS. DICKENS, GEORGE PEABODY and others. The meeting then adjourned sine die, expressing their best wishes for the continuance of friendly relations between the three great nations.

THE ORLEANS FAMILY

Concerning the Banishment of the Princes.

To the Editor of the London Times:

SIR: In your article of to-day respecting the Orleans family, I read the following assertion:

"These Princes find themselves excluded from France by virtue of a decree of the Provisional Government of 1848, which condemned them to perpetual banishment as the children of the head of their House."

Will you allow me, in justice to the Government you mention, to contradict a statement which happens to be altogether inaccurate?

The decree alluded to was issued on the 26th of May, 1848. Now, as early as the 4th of May, the Provisional Government had spontaneously deposited their power in the hands of the National Assembly summoned by themselves. It is not, therefore, with the Provisional Government that the responsibility of that decree, which you describe as having been "dictated by a reason of State in which vindictiveness had at that time at least as large a share as prudence," lies.

Vindictiveness, Sir, had no share in any act of the Provisional Government. Even before the constitution of the republic was over, it had been the loyally expressed feeling of the people of Paris that the Revolution of 1848 should be peaceful, and that it was to an unprecedented degree, the policy of the Provisional Government. All parties were with Lamartine. There was no cry for vengeance. No royalist fell a victim to private or public resentment. Nor could anything exceed the solicitude of the Provisional Government toward the royal family. Agents were dispatched to the Havre with special directions to protect, if needed, the fallen monarch. The Duchess of MONTPENSIER, who had unnecessarily taken refuge at Mr. LAFFITTE's, crossed France in perfect safety. The Princes, without molestation of any kind. A false rumor having become current that the Duke of ORLEANS had been arrested at Mantes, orders were given that the Princes should be immediately released. Not only were the most bitter enemies of the Republic left unharmed, but they were actually allowed by the Provisional Government to rail at and calumniate the very men who made it a point to shield them.

As to the decree of the 26th of May, condemning the Princes of ORLEANS to perpetual banishment, it is worth noticing that many of those who voted for it had belonged to the Orleanist Party, whereas many voted against it who were Republicans. One of the latter was myself.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

SEPT. 10. LOUIS BLANC.

GOETHE.

A Cry for the Poet's Literary Remains.

From the Pall Mall Gazette, Sept. 10.

While we have our terrible posthumous revelations—true or false—about BYRON, Germany is alive with clamors for GOETHE's literary remains, which his grandchildren are accused of wantonly and frivolously secreting, against the express wish of the poet himself. Many years before his death GOETHE carefully arranged his papers and correspondence, and in his will he appointed RIEMER and ECKERMANN as editors. As to the correspondence, there was a special proviso only with regard to ZELTER's and SCHILLER's letters, the former of which were to be published immediately after GOETHE's death for the benefit of ZELTER's daughter; while the latter were to be published in 1850, Schiller's Correspondence shows that GOETHE in January, 1831, had fully made up his mind to give the rest of his correspondence to the world without hesitation. The Germany, however, overcome with patriotic fervor, saw the letters of RIEMER and Count REINHARD, which Chancellor VON MULLER arbitrarily made known—an indiscretion which caused GOETHE's family to reject his offer of acquiring both GOETHE's house and remains for the Burghthing for the sum of 70,000 thalers. When in 1849 the executors published, through SCHUCHARDT, a catalogue of all GOETHE's art and science collections, they declared their disappointment not to be able on that occasion to explain their strange reticence with regard to the delayed publication of the literary remains, but the fact remained that their papers were still sealed, and "they begged all those who sincerely and really loved and revered their grandfather" to suspend their judgment till such time when they would be able to give a full and distinct explanation, and they added, "to the granting of which until just now they had hoped their grandchildren might, perhaps, be the most natural and the truest outward sign of love toward the grandfather"—most mysterious words, which, since MULLER was then still alive, were respected and acted upon. Meanwhile, twenty more years have passed, everybody who could have been in the least degree concerned is dead and gone, and the only action taken by those dutiful executors has consisted in their steady resistance to their grandfather's will; and finally, worst of all, it has come to this, that these treasures are not even any longer notorious. They have extinguished public interest. There are angry protestations throughout the German Press. Nor is the matter thus buried out of sight of a nature to be passed over. Not only do these family archives contain GOETHE's diaries ever since 1775 or 1776, with endless hints of precious facts for his biographer, but also his original letters from Italy, with the many personal passages omitted in the Italian Journey, the wealth of letters from the Ducal family, from the Duke and Prince AUGUST, of Gotha, from GOETHE's mother, HERDER, LAVATER, SCHLEGEL, DALBERG, the two HUMBOLDTS, VOSS, BETTINA, BERGHAM, that multitude of statesmen, artists, writers, men and women, to whom GOETHE stood in long and intimate relation.

LATEST NEWS NOTES.

M. PAUL DE CASSAGNAC's election as member of the Council General of Gers, has been annulled in consequence of a flaw in the transfer to him, by his father, of certain property, by right of which he went up for a seat in the Municipal Board.

The Reppel states that M. GAMBETTA has so far progressed toward recovery as to inspire his friends with confidence that he will be able to take his seat at the assembling of the Legislative Body. The orator's journey may be attributed to the gentle urging which he is trying at Vevey with undoubted success.

M. VICTOR CONSIDERANT, formerly Representative of the people in the Constitutional and Legislative Assemblies, who had been condemned to deportation and loss of civil rights for the part he took in the insurrection of June, 1849, has arrived in Paris with his wife in consequence of the late amnesty.

A terrible catastrophe had taken place at Ulm, in Wurtemberg. The members of a Catholic association were making an excursion on the Danube, in three large boats lashed together, as is sometimes done on that river, when the vessels, being suddenly caught in the current, were dashed against the piles of a mill and upset. Out of about fifty persons on board more than twenty were drowned.

CLEMENT HARWOOD, for some years a clerk in the firm of HARWOOD, KNIGHT & ALLEN, in which his father is the senior partner, had been charged before the Lord Mayor with stealing bills of exchange to the amount of $15,000 from the firm. In consideration of the prisoner's youth, and his relationship to the head of the firm, the prosecutor asked leave to withdraw the charge, and the Lord Mayor, notwithstanding the important interests involved, allowed this course to be pursued.

The steamship Frankfort has lately arrived in Bremen from the docks of Messrs. CAIRD & Co., of Greenock. It is the extremely fine vessel built to the North German Lloyd, and the first of their vessels intended for the service between Bremen and New-Orleans. Properly speaking the Frankfort will not open this line, as the North German Lloyd has already sent several ships to America to establish the necessary communications, but it will open the regular service on the 15th September.

The seventh session of the International Statistical Congress opened at the Hague on the 6th inst. After the first sitting the Congress is to be divided into five sections, which will respectively discuss the following subjects: The Theory and Application of Statistics; the Statistics of Civil and Commercial Law; Finance; Fisheries and Commerce, and the Transatlantic Possessions of Europe. Delegates were present from the United States, Austria, Bavaria, Belgium, Denmark, Egypt, France, Great Britain, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Norway, Prussia, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland, &c.

The Fremdenblatt, of Vienna, has the following:

"The Reichsrath will probably meet between the 10th and 15th of November. The session of the Diets will therefore be closed toward that period. Some of these provincial assemblies will commence their sittings this week, and will be occupied first of all with the question of direct election by universal suffrage, the resolutions voted last year by two of them only on that subject not having been taken into consideration by the Government. As to the Hungarian Parliament, the time of its opening is not yet fixed, but the fact is certain that the regular sittings will not take place before the middle of October."

A Brussels letter in the Journal of Liège has the following: "Belgium has just been invited to take part in a Maritime Congress, which will be held at Naples in the Spring of next year. The question will not refer to the navy, for in that case the invitation could be hardly serious. The meeting will have to occupy itself with the interests of the merchant service and of international commerce. A naval exhibition will be held in connection with this assembly."

An answer had been given at the Clerkenwell Police Court to a complaint made by a Mr. M'ALLISTER, that his daughter had been permitted without his knowledge to leave a Roman Catholic convent at St. Pancras, and emigrate to America. The question of the matter was entirely beyond the control of the Sisterhood of the convent, and the Magistrates appeared to conclude from a letter of the young lady's, which was read, that she had sufficient reason for preferring New-York to London. The complaint was then dismissed.

The Kirchentag, or Convocation, held at Stuttgard, had adopted by acclamation a reply to the Pope's manifesto to the Protestants and non-Catholics. The German divines decline altogether to recognize any right in the Pope to call them together, or of any ecclesiastical assembly to exercise authority over them. They record their determination that "the Bible shall never again be buried under the proud towers of lofty cathedrals."

The Federal Council, in reply to a circular note of Prince HOHENLOHE, the Bavarian Minister, has addressed a note to the European Governments, dated 9th April last, in reference to a common protest against any programme that might be laid down by the Ecumenical Council, and which might clash with the authority of the State, and declining to take any part in the Council. According to official information, the reply of the Federal Council states that, although it quite agrees with Prince HOHENLOHE in the principles expressed in his note relative to the duties incumbent on the State in the case of any interference by clerical councils, it is not in a position to protest previously, or to take preventive measures against any decisions which might be adopted by the Ecumenical Council without consulting the representatives of the State authorities. The Federal Council is the more bound, in view of the ecclesiastical authorities of the Swiss Confederation, to abstain from taking such steps, since the Council has known long what constitutional means exist to enable the Federal authorities to meet any decisions of the Ecumenical Council, which might contravene the principles of the Swiss Constitution, or disturb the peace among the various religious denominations.

Mr. F. C. MONBREAD, who has been deputed by the Manchester Chamber of Commerce to MM. Ward & Co., of Guatemala, to inquire into the question affecting the supply of cotton from America, has addressed a long letter to the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, which appears in the Manchester Examiner of Sept. 7. MONBREAD believes in the possibility of reviving the trade of Lancashire with a purpose for this purpose either that the surplus machinery of the manufacturing districts should be removed to the Southern States, where there is abundance of cotton to work profitably, or that Lancashire capital should be sent to buy land, import Chinese and native cotton [illegible] "better than either," that a company should be organized to [illegible] the Southern States, and employ Coolies and Chinese, who would be equal to the production, within two years, of an additional million of bales in the South for importation to Lancashire. The reason the people of the Southern States do not undertake this work themselves is, he says, that they have not the money for the purpose.

Schemes for constructing and laying submarine lines of telegraph from Europe to America, says the London Times, are being promoted with a rapidity which is marvelous when the magnitude of the projects is considered. We understand that the Ocean Telegraph Company intends to lay a new line from the southwest of Ireland to Halifax, in Nova Scotia. A new submarine system is also to be constructed between Germany and America, and it is stated by the Chancellor of the North German Confederation to certain gentlemen interested in the scheme provided for the landing of the new cable at a suitable point of the North German sea-coast, and also for the erection near the place of landing of all the requisite buildings for the working. The Chancellor reserves to himself the right of selecting the point at which the cable is to be landed and connected with the telegraph lines of North Germany. He, on the other hand, will make the arrangements necessary for guarding against the malicious destruction of the cable, and for protecting it against injuries from vessels or fishing-boats. The incorporations may lay the line direct without touching any other territory than those of the two countries named, or, via England and Newfoundland, to any point between New-York and Boston. They have the option also of constructing a new cable, or of buying any submarine cable already existing, which may be available for their purpose. If the latter alternative be adopted, the Chancellor reserves to himself the right, before the purchase of the cable or cables, to cause the same to be examined with a view to test the working capacities as well as to consider the risks to which it or they may be subjected. He also reserves the right of refusing to allow the purchase.

The following letter has been addressed by Mr. BRIGHT to Mr. LEONARD KADEBY, Jr., of Rochdale:

ROCHDALE, Sept. 6.

DEAR SIR: I thank you for the newspaper. There are knaves in the world, and there are simpletons, and the one class preys on the other. The Tory Party is always driven to these tricks when they cannot otherwise appeal to the multitude. If you complain that too many Customs duties have been repealed, they will perhaps kindly tell the workingmen what duties they will put on again. Is it the duty on corn or cattle, or do they wish a duty on imported cotton? If a foreigner will not buy cheaply from us, will it be a matter of joy if we refuse to buy cheaply from him; or from some other foreigner? If wages have risen from 25 to 50 per cent. since 1846, is this consistent with a wrong policy as to our foreign trade? The pamphlet to which you refer bears the marks of having been written in Bedlam. It is a mere confusion of figures, and is wholly without logic or sense. The good harvest will tend to restore health to the general trade of the country; and when we have a sufficient supply of cotton, Lancashire will recover from its present depressed condition. It is more cotton we want, and not more taxes on imports. I suppose the people of Lancashire will not fail to understand this. I am, respectfully yours,

JOHN BRIGHT.

A "Lawyers' Congress," attended by some of the most eminent jurists of Germany, had just been held at Heidelberg, and had passed several resolutions of important social and judicial questions. Among these were the following: 1. Civil marriages should be recognized as a necessary principle of the relations between Church and State in the whole of Germany; and the State should make no objection to the marriage of persons of different religions. This was opposed by Dr. GREIFF, and passed against a minority of one only. 2. That Government sanction should not be required for the formation of joint-stock companies or other associations, but that the liability of each member of such a company should be unlimited. 3. A written document acknowledging a debt should be taken as sufficient proof of such debt, independently of the circumstances under which the debt was incurred. 4. As nearly all the objects of punishment are more effectually obtained by solitary confinement than by any other mode of imprisonment, such confinement should be recognized by law as the regulated mode of executing sentences which involve the loss of liberty; exceptions to this rule might be made when necessary, either by the Judge or the Governor of the Prison. This resolution was passed almost unanimously.

Metropolitan Fire Department.

A meeting of the Commissioners took place yesterday, Commissioner GALWAY in the chair.

A resolution recommending that the engineers of steamers be relieved from patrol duty was referred.

A report was received from the Surveyor, stating that he had examined the premises of Messrs. SHOMBERG & Co., dealers in metals, of No. 20 Cedar-street, and found the floor of the building in a very dangerous condition and of faulty construction. The Surveyor recommended that the parties operating the furnaces be required to construct a separate flue upon the premises and discontinue operations until such arrangements shall have been completed. The recommendation was adopted.

The Committee on Storage of Combustibles reported the following persons upon whose premises kerosene oil had been found below the stand-and test:

JAMES ILLINGWORTH, No. 1,097 Third-avenue; BERNHARD SCHNEIDER, No. 6 Essex-street; CHAS. BECKERS, No. 215 Broome-street; WM. BECKERS, No. 196 Ludlow-street; GEORGE L. SMITH, No. 40 East Broadway, liquid gas, and JOHN SMITH & Co., No. 117 Ludlow-street, liquid gas.

It was resolved that legal proceedings be instituted in the name of the Metropolitan Fire Department against the above-named dealers to enforce the collection of penalties incurred.

The Board then adjourned.

probably concealed behind some nominal Plaintiff or Complainant in the case. The subsequent rumor was that the proceeding would be vacated by the Court at Albany, and that the Directors of the Central, who are in session in that City to-day, would proceed with their business as though no interference had taken place. We shall probably have by telegraph to-night the result of the meeting, so far as it is to be made public. The Western Roads participated in the flurry of the day, not so much in sympathy with the Vanderbilt Stocks as from the increased difficulty of borrowing Money upon them. Reading and Erie were also lower, while Pacific Mail, owing to the efforts of its new allies, was fairly supported until near the close of the day. About 4 o'clock this Afternoon the following quotations were made as compared with Tuesday night, the market still under much excitement:

The following card from one of our Stock Exchange firms relates to a recent report of the bad faith of their Chicago partner:

NEW-YORK, Monday, Aug. 30, 1869.

To the Editor of the Chicago Republican:

As your issue of the 11th inst. contained statements in regard to Mr. W. P. VAN DEUSEN, our late partner in Chicago, which, if unanswered, would greatly damage his character, we feel it due to Mr. VAN DEUSEN to state that some days since he returned to this City, and, having satisfactorily explained the cause of his absence, returned to us the ten United States bonds of $1,000 each, which he had taken with our consent, in the regular course of business, on the day before his departure from Chicago, and that all outstanding accounts between him and us have been settled in full.

We regret that the fatal accident to Mr. VAN DEUSEN'S son, of which the father had no knowledge until a few days ago, should have given currency to rumors that would not otherwise have been published. Respectfully yours,

SWAN & PAYSON.

The St. Nicholas Bank, on and after Oct. 1, will pay the interest coupons of the first mortgage bonds of the Columbus, Chicago, and Indiana Central Railway Company, also of the Union and Logansport Railroad Company, and also of the Chicago and Great Eastern Railroad, due on that date. We also direct attention to the card of the Columbus, Chicago, and Indiana Central Company, and of the issuers of the line, which will be found in our advertising columns.

Mr. ALBERT H. NICOLAY will hold his regular semi-weekly auction sale of stocks and bonds this day, (Thursday,) Sept. 23, at 12:30 o'clock P. M., at the Exchange Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway.

The Disposition of Treasury Gold.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The New-York financiers are at present exercised upon the high prices demanded for Gold, and for the use [of Currency—the former being upon the latter to the extent of its holding upon borrowed money.

The lock up of Gold affects negotiations for the export of Cotton and Breadstuffs, which are wanted for shipment, but orders remain unfilled because shippers can make no contracts for their Exchange or its equivalent, Gold, with sufficient certainty to give confidence in their purchases to be paid for in Currency.

The problem now presented is, How can Gold be made more abundant without absorbing Currency in its holding? as any moderate amount of Gold brought into the market would be taken up and controlled by the parties now operating for a corner to enable them to demand higher rates for its use next month.

It is estimated that there are not over twenty millions of dollars in Gold owned in this City by Banks and others, and that more than this amount is within the control by contract and holding of the combination for a rise in the premium.

If the Government sells its usual amount of Gold to purchase Bonds for the Sinking Fund, it will have no good effect, and the operation, if made for Currency, disturbs the current of the Banking movement, even if only for the day. Any large amount of Gold sold for Currency would increase the difficulty.

The payment of Gold for interest on Bonds of the United States 1st November is anticipation would not materially benefit the market, as there are probably but few Coupons ready, and none received from Europe. The system of payment in advance is also objectionable in many respects, or the old adage is false.

One other plan appears practicable to accomplish the end desired. There are many millions of United States Bonds carried in New-York by Loans, waiting sale, export, or otherwise the sale of a portion of these Bonds would release the equivalent of Currency. If the Treasury purchase these Bonds directly for Gold there would be no other disturbance of Banking operations than the occasion of finding use for the Currency released, which would very well carry the Gold if needed.

The duties to be paid in October at all the ports will amount to about $15,000,000 in gold. Let the Treasury anticipate these receipts by offering to purchase $2,000,000 of Bonds with Gold on each Friday in October, viz.: 1st, 8th, 15th, 22d, 29th; this plan, if settled and made public sufficiently in advance, will correct the evils now existing; it will provide gold for negotiations of exports and imports. Opening the market for Gold will relieve the embarrassments now suffered by the amount of Currency required to carry on the speculation in gold, and this relief will benefit the wholesale dealers by giving them a chance to get money for their business paper, thus running the circle. It will give more activity to trade in all departments, and the Government will not suffer, but will obtain the usual amount of Bonds for the Sinking Fund and for the disposal of Congress.

The establishment of a real market price in gold for United States Securities, in which foreign bankers can operate with safety, will give confidence to their value and avoid the circumlocution of calculating various equivalents which are always uncertain and unprofitable.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

☞ EIGHT PER CENT. CURRENCY BONDS, OF THE ALABAMA AND CHATTANOOGA RAILROAD COMPANY, FREE OF GOVERNMENT TAX. INDORSED BY THE STATE OF GEORGIA. Entire issue only $194,000. For sale at 92½ and interest, by SOUTTER & CO., No. 52 William-st., HENRY CLEWS & CO., No. 32 Wall-st.

☞ FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS Of the Montgomery and Eufaula Railroad, indorsed by the State of Alabama, bearing 8 per cent. interest in gold. Price 101 and accrued interest in currency. For sale by GEORGE OPDYKE & CO., Bankers, No. 25 Nassau-st.

☞ THE SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD BONDS OF the Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad Company are selling rapidly. The semi-annual interest will be paid Oct. 1, in gold coin, which makes a saving of one per cent. to those who purchase during the present month. See advertisement on the eighth page.

TURNER BROTHERS, Bankers, No. 14 Nassau-st.

☞ MANY CAPITALISTS ARE INVESTING in the bonds of the Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad Company, considering them the cheapest security now in the market. Both the principal and 7 per cent. interest are payable in gold. See advertisement on the eighth page.

☞ THE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS OF THE UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, INTEREST SIX PER CENT. IN GOLD.

The Union Pacific Railroad has been in successful operation since May 10, and it is pronounced by the thousands who have passed over it to be in all respects as safe and well built as any railroad in the country. By the Pullman Palace Cars the journey is not only made without danger, but without unusual fatigue. The fears that many have expressed in relation to the perils of the overland trip are removed by experience, and the travel is steadily increasing.

The earnings of the road since its opening are officially stated by the Company as follows:

From May 10 to May 31	$391,420 12
From June 1 to June 30	776,002 36
From July 1 to July 31	623,559 36

Notwithstanding the rates for passengers and freight have been largely reduced, the earnings for August will be about the same average. They will be published as soon as full returns are received. The earnings, as stated above, are at an average of about EIGHT MILLION DOLLARS A YEAR, which will be steadily augmented by the development of the Pacific coast, by settlement along the line, and by the natural increase of traffic.

The First Mortgage Bonds of the Company amount to $16,000,000, and the interest liability is $1,728,000 gold, or about $2,592,000 in currency. It will be noticed that the present earnings provide an ample fund for the payment of this interest and leave a large surplus. We are also satisfied that at present market rates these bonds are a very desirable investment, and that they will advance in price as soon as the facts concerning the business and condition of the Company are generally understood. THE LAND GRANT BONDS, to the amount of TEN MILLION DOLLARS, were issued to obtain means to finish the road, and are secured by A FIRST MORTGAGE upon the entire Land Grant of the Company, amounting to 12,800,000 acres. Three million acres of this land in the Platte Valley, in Nebraska, are admitted to be equal to any in the West. The sales of land were opened in Omaha July 7, and 40,000 acres were sold during a month thereafter, at an average price of over $6 per acre. While a part of the remainder of the land is of little value for agricultural purposes, there is another part from which a considerable sum will be realized. The value of the Land Grant is largely enhanced by the extensive road since, which are now being worked for the supply of the surrounding country, as well as for the railroad, and by other valuable mineral deposits, especially of copper.

THE LAND GRANT BONDS ARE RECEIVED in payment for all the Company's lands, at par, and the demand from actual settlers will give them a certain market. They run twenty years and pay seven per cent. interest in currency.

Although the Company have disposed of all their bonds, yet, as they are offered in market, we continue to fill orders at the current rates.

We have no hesitation in recommending both the First Mortgage and the Land Grant Bonds as a very valuable and perfectly safe investment. JOHN J. CISCO & SON, Bankers, No. 53 Wall-st., New-York.

☞ SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST FIRST MORTGAGE CONVERTIBLE SINKING FUND BONDS, FREE OF GOVERNMENT TAX. BURLINGTON, CEDAR RAPIDS AND MINNESOTA RAILROAD COMPANY. We earnestly recommend these Bonds as a first class investment. At the price they yield about 10 per cent. interest per annum. Pamphlets and full information can be had on application. HENRY CLEWS & CO., No. 32 Wall-st., Financial Agents of the Company.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

☞ THE LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD is 307 miles long, cost, (with equipment,) $45,000,000, and is doing a large and steadily increasing business; the earnings for August, 1869, being $94,782 in excess (from the corresponding month of 1868. The road has a bonded debt of but $9,000,000. To retire this debt as maturity, and to effect certain valuable extensions which will largely increase their business, the Company have mortgaged the entire road, rolling stock, franchise, and income to JAMES FUNNETT and JUNIUS S. ALEXANDER, of New-York, to secure the payment of eight million dollars of First Mortgage Bonds, which are now offered for sale at ninety and accrued interest. The bonds are for one thousand dollars each, have thirty-five years to run, and bear seven per cent. interest annually, payable in April and October, at the Bank of America, in this City. The security is undoubted, and the bonds constitute a perfectly safe and very desirable investment. The agents of the Company in New-York are Messrs. J. E. ALEXANDER & CO., No. 13 Nassau-st., and JOHN J. CISCO & SON, No. 53 Wall-st.

☞ FIRST MORTGAGE LAND GRANT BONDS of Lake Superior and Mississippi Railroad Company, Land Grant, 20 years, free of United States taxes. We recommend these bonds as a safe and profitable investment, producing nearly 10 per cent. per annum in money, or at the market rate of 7 per cent. in gold, at an income of 14 per cent. in not annual income. Present price is eighty and accrued interest. Full particulars furnished by JAY COOKE & CO.

☞ HOLDERS OF PACIFIC MAIL STOCK are desired to attend meetings at the next annual election, will please register themselves as stock holders, and in an early day send their proxies to C. K. GARRISON, Esq., No. 1 Bowling-green, or to LOCKWOOD & CO., No. 5 Broadway.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

It is reported that the Cortes on reassembling will first take up the subject of choosing a King. The King of Portugal is said to be the favorite among the candidates.

The anniversary of the first French Republic was celebrated in Paris on Tuesday by a banquet and fête.

The London Daily Telegraph regards the declaration of Father HYACINTHE as a mere manifestation showing the commotion in the Catholic Church, and threatening the spiritual peace of the Ecumenical Council. Le Temps and Le Siècle both regard the act of the eloquent Father as calculated to produce a great effect at this crisis of the Church. The Journal des Débats, in an article on the Council, looks upon the religious situation as one fraught with serious consequences.

During a Republican demonstration to General PIERRAD at Tarragona on Tuesday, there was much excitement on the streets, and the Secretary of the Governor was killed. Many persons were arrested before order was restored. PIERRAD, it is said, will be arrested. He has fled to Valencia. Republican papers reprobate the violence.

NAPOLEON presided at the Council of Ministers yesterday. Prince NAPOLEON is spoken of for the Spanish throne.

The Universal Peace Congress is in session at Lausanne, Switzerland, and VICTOR HUGO at a banquet given to the delegates on Tuesday, toasting the United States, said Europe would eventually be a Federative Republic.

The Sublime Porte persists in his demands on the Viceroy of Egypt on the loan question.

The Crown Prince of Prussia will soon start for Alexandria, to be present at the Suez Canal opening. Baron VAN WEYHER, Ex-Austrian Minister, has been appointed Minister to France and Prince REUSS, Minister to Austria.

Regent SERRANO will leave Madrid this week, for the baths of Alhama.

CUBA.

The arrival of General PRIM is telegraphed from Madrid, and at a Cabinet meeting held soon after it was resolved to use every effort to save Cuba, and to dispatch troops to the island.

The London Times, in discussing the Cuban question, says Spain, by a bold show of patriotism and courage, has won an advantage, while SICKLES is alarmed at the result of his proceedings. Spain will not part with Cuba without a struggle; but SICKLES expected no such resistance as his note provoked. It is believed, it says further, that he exceeded his authority, and therefore America is not responsible for his acts. The Standard thinks Spain would lose Cuba and Porto Rico in a war with the United States, but to the latter country the mischief would bring no corresponding good, and concludes that the American Government will not further interfere in Cuban matters.

An Havana dispatch states that in a recent skirmish near Ecruciado, sixteen Cubans were killed.

GENERAL.

The Democratic State Convention met at Syracuse yesterday. Hon. S. J. TILDEN, in calling the Convention to order, spoke at length, taking strong ground against the Fifteenth Amendment. Hon. FERRIS C. DENNISTON, of Steuben, was chosen temporary, and Lieutenant-Governor ALLEN C. BEACH, permanent Chairman; WM. CASSIDY, of Albany, was made Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions. At the afternoon session the present State officers were renominated, with W. W. WRIGHT for Canal Commissioner, and FORDIS LAPLIN, of Ulster, for State Prison Inspector. Judge LOTT, of Kings, was nominated for the long term, and ROBERT EARL, of Herkimer, for the short term, as Judges of the Court of Appeals. At the evening session the State Central Committee was named, the platform presented and adopted, the most important plank of which is a repudiation of the Fifteenth Amendment, and the Convention adjourned sine die.

A Democratic State Convention of Massachusetts assembled at Worcester yesterday. Hon. CHARLES SUMNER presided and delivered an important speech, which will be found in another column. The old State officers were renominated, except the State Auditor—CHARLES HENDLOTT, of Canton, receiving this place on the ticket. The resolutions express confidence in the Administration, and leave the temperance question to the Legislature.

At Manistee, Mich., GEO. VANDERPOOL has been arrested, charged with the murder of his partner in the banking business, HERMAN FIELD. FIELD disappeared a few days since in a mysterious manner, and on the 15th inst. his body was found on the lake shore, twenty-five miles from Manistee, with every indication of having been foully dealt with.

POTTERS, a murderer, was hung at Murray Bay, on Monday. He declared his crime on the scaffold. The execution was a horrible one, caused, it is said, by the intoxication of the Montreal executioner, who was the official employed.

Governor HOFFMAN was taken suddenly ill yesterday, and forbidden by his physician to leave his residence.

At the hearing in the Brooks case yesterday, in Philadelphia, the officer failed to recognize any of the arrested parties as those present when he was shot.

The repairs of the Erie Canal break, at Fool's Brook, will be completed by Saturday.

A boot-manufacturing firm in Quebec have discharged each of its workmen as belong to the St. Crispin Society, and a pastoral letter has been read in the Catholic Churches detailing absolution to Catholics connected with the Order. The Society is on a strike in Toronto and Montreal.

Colonel T. W. NAPIER, Sheriff of Lincoln County, was shot and killed, and Mr. DAVIDSON, Marshal, mortally wounded, at Stanford, Ky., on Saturday night, by a drunken man named HOLMES, whom they were trying to arrest for creating a disturbance. HOLMES escaped, and $1,000 reward is offered by the Governor of the State.

WILLIAM MOODY, a farmer in Madison, Ind., on Tuesday murdered his wife, set fire to his house and outbuildings, watched them while being consumed, and then shot himself dead.

The sessions of the National Universalist Convention at Buffalo yesterday were principally taken up in discussing the report of the Committee on Centennial work, as the year 1870 will complete the century since the foundation of the church in America. Sermons were preached in the morning and evening in different churches.

The discovery of the skeletons of a woman and child near Loch Lomond, New Brunswick, causes great excitement, and has led to the arrest of a man named KANE on the suspicion of murdering his wife and child.

During a thunder storm in Yarmouth, N. S., on Tuesday, the lightning struck the house of JOSEPH HAMILTON, instantly killing himself and his wife, and burning to death their bedridden daughter in the fire which ensued.

A mutiny took place near Boston Tuesday night on board the British ship Alexandria, as she was starting for Liverpool. The Captain and mate of the vessel were severely stabbed by one of the crew. Two of the ringleaders were arrested and taken to Boston.

The Standard Oil Works, near Pittsburg, Penn., took fire yesterday, and it was feared the entire works would be destroyed.

Mr. GEORGE PEABODY, yesterday, made an additional donation of $400,000 to the Peabody Institute of Baltimore, Md.

The Captain of the Horne, recently detained at Halifax as a filibuster, claims, it is said, of the Dominion Government $2,000 a day demurrage, and is also likely to bring a suit for damages. The informant has disappeared.

Rev. Mr. PERRY, a local Methodist preacher, while addressing a congregation at Columbus, Brazoria County, Texas, on the evening of the 8th inst., was fired at and killed by six armed desperadoes who entered the church.

LOCAL.

Wall-street was thrown into a fever of excitement yesterday by the sudden fluctuations in the Vanderbilt stocks and the rise in gold. New-York Central fell from 159 to 177 in a few minutes, and rose again almost as quickly to 194¾, afterward falling off to 188. The fluctuations in Hudson River and Harlem were from six to ten per cent. The excitement was caused by the rumor of an injunction by Judge BARNARD forbidding the consolidation of the Central and Hudson River Roads. Judge BARNARD, it is said, denies having issued such an injunction. Gold was put up from 137½ to 141½ by the party that has undertaken to corner it.

At a meeting of the Board of Health, yesterday, permission was given the New-York Rendering Company to continue their operations to the 1st of May next. A communication, treating upon the important subject of the tenement-house system, was also submitted by Mr. EATON, and ordered on file.

The Twenty-third-street Union Republican General Committee met last evening, and unanimously adopted an agreement as a basis of the reunion of the three hitherto discordant organizations in this county.

A colored man named GEORGE GARWOOD has collected $100 from the good people in the western part of Long Island, by falsely representing that he was the man who was recently buried alive in a well out there.

DANIEL MCNAMARA, in a fit of temporary insanity, attempted to cut his wife's throat with a razor, in Jersey City, Tuesday, but was prevented by his son-in-law.

The body of a man who had apparently been killed and thrown into the North River was found floating near the Battery yesterday. It is thought to be that of upright watchman, murdered by river thieves.

The Police of the Tenth Precinct have contributed $50 toward the Avondale Relief Fund.

Two cases of small-pox are reported by the Police at No. 326 West Sixteenth-street. The Health Board have taken action in the matter.

The new Republican Central Committee met at Apollo Hall, last evening, and agreed to a basis for the reorganization of the Republican party in this City.

Turkey Preparing for Peace.

Four vessels have very recently left this port laden with firearms, and a fifth is upon the point of starting. Their cargoes consist of one hundred and twenty-five thousand Enfield and two hundred and twenty-five thousand Springfield rifles, which have been purchased from the United States Government, for account of the Porte, by his Excellency BLACQUE BEY, the Ottoman Minister at Washington.

Nor are these the only preparations which the Ottoman Government is making in this country for the preservation of peace with her powerful neighbor. It is establishing an armory in Turkey, upon the plan of our armory at Springfield, for the fabrication of small arms, and the machinery for it is now constructing in this country.

These are facts pregnant with curious reflections. It is less than five years since the Sultan has seen fit to send to us a diplomatic representative. He now passes by all the armories of Europe to equip his army from American arsenals and his new armory with American machinery. This is a compliment to American mechanism for which in the name of our ingenious craftsmen we make a bow.

But what do these large purchases of arms, these stealthy military preparations portend? That is the question which will be upon the tongue of every one who reads what we have written. We think we can answer it. Turkey has within a very short period turned over a new leaf. Her statesmen no longer accept the reproach made against them by GIBBON, of being only camped in Europe. Formerly the army and also the civil service consisted exclusively of Mussulmans, who assumed to be the sole rulers, proprietors and natural defenders of the soil; all other natives or subjugated people being vassals or serfs. She was isolated like China by a natural mass of waters, holding as little communication as possible with other nations. Its Government was the extreme barbaric expression of absolutism, under which no right was respected, no virtue protected.

This epoch in the history of Turkey is rapidly passing away. The Government is beginning to recognize the rights of the governed; it is opening and encouraging intercourse with foreign nations; the present Sultan has disregarded the tradition which prohibited the sovereigns of Turkey from quitting the Empire; the schools of learning in Europe swarm with youthful Turks; academies of science are being founded within the Empire; the despotic rule of former times is being transformed into a quasi constitutional Government through the Tanzimat, with a responsible Ministry of which the Sultan is the executive. The Porte now abounds with Christian as well as Mussulman functionaries; the Koran, which used to be the sole law of the land, has been superseded by statutory and constitutional enactments based upon the Napoleonic code; and more recently the Prussian landwehr has been adopted, which furnishes the immediate occasion for the large purchases of arms which we have announced. To give efficacy to these and other reforms in contemplation Turkey needs peace. Unhappily she has a neighbor on the North who is disposed, or at least suspected of a disposition, to sow dissension between the Christian and Turkish population; to thwart every scheme of reform, to propagate intrigues and seditions among the serfs, and all to gratify a Muscovite passion to see the Russian standard float from the dome of St. Sophia.

It is to counteract this Northern influence, as we understand it, that Turkey is arming, in accordance with the Napoleonic maxim, that Providence is always on the side of the heaviest artillery. With an army well equipped with American arms; with an armory mounted with improved American machinery, she expects the Czar will forbear to disturb her while she goes on with the railroad and other national improvements, for the prosecution of which peace is indispensable.

In this laudable purpose, we wish the Turks every success. When we have supplied them with all the arms they require for their defense, we shall hope to send them our agricultural and mechanical implements, some of our idle ship carpenters, a selection of our school books, and at last, if they will receive it, the Bible. Thus equipped, the Sultan may defy the Czar "and the rest of mankind."

Senator Sumner's Speech.

The speech of Senator SUMNER to the Massachusetts Convention, delivered yesterday and published in full this morning in our columns, consists of a general summary of that distinguished gentleman's opinions on the leading political questions of the hour.

Beginning with "two special classes still in jeopardy, as in the Autumn of 1865—the national freedman and the national creditor; and behind these the faithful Unionists in the ex-rebel States,"—Mr. SUMNER declares that the former must rely for protection on the pending constitutional amendment, aided by "a prevailing public opinion, and a sympathetic Administration." Passing to the subject of the national credit, he insists that "a Democrat is a repudiator," and that "repudiation is confiscation" of the property of loyal citizens. He argues that schemes of repudiation compel us to pay extra interest on our bonded debt, holding that "our debt could have been funded without paying more than four per cent., but for the doubt cast upon our credit by the dishonest schemes of repudiators."

As to Cuba, Mr. SUMNER advises non-intervention. "I am satisfied that the true rule for us is non-intervention, except in the way of good offices." As to recognition of Cuban belligerency, he thinks that the evidence does not show that there is any "belligerence as a fact" that can properly be recognized by our Government. Regarding England, his words are very few. He takes occasion, however, to declare that in his famous speech on the Alabama claims, he designed to make no demand for pecuniary or other reparation—he merely stated the case itself in full. And, as to France, the reason why no account was presented against her was that "no pirate ships or blockade runners were built under shelter of her recognition, to prey upon our commerce." He closes with a hearty expression of belief that Canada will, ere long, in accordance with the desires of her own people, be admitted to our Union.

A Plea for Rat-a-tinetts.

Our neighbors of Philadelphia profess to be law-abiding and humane people, and, as the world goes, we believe they are; but we would like some of their wise men to reconcile such a reputation with the facts we are about to submit to their notice.

"Be it enacted, &c., That from and after the passage of this act it shall not be lawful for any person within this commonwealth to shoot, kill or in any way trap or destroy any blue-bird, swallow, martin or other insectivorous bird, at any season of the year, under the penalty of $5."

Now, how does it happen, in the face and eyes of this law, that their markets are glutted every season with the "mortal remains" of that most lovely of all our Summer birds—the bobolink, which during the Spring and Summer is not only very beautiful in its black and white garb, but a very delightful singer, and withal so exclusively insectivorous.

The wretch who would shoot one of these lovely little creatures at that season ought to be incontinently ducked in a horse-pond. Yet as soon as they don their traveling garb, and, on their way South, stop to regale themselves on the reeds of the Delaware, they are received by a murderous fire from the Philadelphians, which is kept up until they leave for the equally inhospitable rice fields of the South. It is distressing to think that this innocent bird, which has been an object of delight all Summer, may be finished at a mouthful by some greasy gourmand!

If the Philadelphians do not put a stop to their brutality and enforce the laws, foreign sporting circles will have to concede belligerent rights to the poor birds and give the Philadelphians a taste of English neutrality. We commend this matter to the paternal consideration of the Ledger.

A Hint for the Secretary of the Navy.

An article in the London Times of the 20th of August exhibits the vigilance of the English authorities to detect and avail themselves of any improvement in naval architecture, armament or nautical change of any description. During the war the policy of our statesmen and the genius of our people wrought a revolution in naval warfare, which other nations have seen and appreciated more, probably, than our own people. It is not strange, perhaps, that naval men are slow to adopt new theories or changes of a radical character. Innovations and experiments of every kind invade the course and training which have been their study, and in which they have tried to make themselves proficient. For the same reasons they are ready, sometimes too ready, to imitate and copy whatever is English, even to the names of their vessels. There are many exceptions, but the traits alluded to are very general among educated naval men.

The invention of ERICSSON, called into service and adopted by the Navy Department at the beginning of the war, is an exemplification of what is stated. The Monitor was viewed with disfavor by many of the most intelligent naval officers until after she encountered the Merrimac at Hampton Roads. That conflict was a practical demonstration which was not lost upon our countrymen, and had a marked influence upon the English mind, confirmed by the capture of the Atlanta by the Weehawken in Wassaw Sound.

For harbor and coast defence the turret vessels will perform all that was promised or expected of them. The Navy Department seems never to have considered them as adopted to cruising purposes, though some enthusiasts have been so sanguine as to believe they would be successful in that respect. The voyages of the Miantonomah to Europe, and the Monadnock to California, proved the capabilities of this class of vessels for sea service to be greater than was generally supposed until the trials were made.

But the Navy Department, stimulated by the exigencies of the period and the threatened dangers of a foreign war in 1863 and 1862, felt the necessity of other and different means to meet impending difficulties. For defensive war the monitor vessels were all that was required, but for offensive war, with a maritime Power, something of a different character was demanded. The fast blockade runners of the Clyde had begun to appear, and the career of the Alabama, which was then just commencing its devastations on our commerce, taught us what damage a single fast steamer could do to the shipping interest of any country. In view of these facts the Navy Department, comprehending the true condition of affairs, and the future necessities that must result from the changes already introduced in naval warfare and naval tactics by recent inventions, marked out for itself a line of policy for aggressive as well as defensive operations.

Both England and France were at that time engaged in constructing immense iron-clads, involving expenditures of enormous amounts, such as we could not well afford, and were not prepared to build. Large and powerful as those vessels were, they appeared less formidable to the Secretary and the naval authorities here than to the English and French. Our turret vessels, almost on a level with the water with their fifteen-inch guns, would have every advantage in an encounter with their huge monitors which presented a lofty target for assault. Besides, their iron-clads drew so great a depth of water that our shallow coast was almost inaccessible to them. We needed no such vessels, and had little apprehensions from them in the possession of our enemies.

The Navy Department, instead of building similar iron-clads to meet the La Gloire or the Black Prince, adopted another and entirely different class of vessels to carry on offensive war. Armor for defence, but speed for aggressive warfare was the policy determined upon by the Secretary. The former we had in the monitor vessels, and to secure speed, he called upon the experts of the Department—the constructors and engineers—to devise a model ship which should outsail any other craft afloat. In the construction of these chasers, as they were designated, other qualities were necessarily made secondary to obtain speed, as upon speed alone was their usefulness and efficiency to depend. In the words of one of the documents, "it was proposed to construct a vessel having a greater speed by several miles per hour than any other steamer; which should be able to go to the British coast in case of hostilities, and burn, sink and destroy every vessel of inferior force, naval or merchant, that might be found there. Nothing she pursued could escape her, and nothing she fled from could overtake her. Her speed would enable her to enter and leave any port despite the most vigilant blockade."

This was the object and purpose to be obtained in the construction of the Wampanoag and vessels of her class, designed and commenced in 1863, although not completed until after the close of the war, and when all apprehensions of a foreign war had disappeared. The speed of this vessel was about twenty miles an hour, at which rate she could accomplish the ends for which she was built. The English naval authorities were not slow to detect the policy which our Navy Department have marked out, and to meet it have brought forward as their champion ship the Inconstant, which, the Engineer of the 20th of July says, was built to compete with the Wampanoag, but which does not equal her in speed. The London Times says "the Inconstant is the latest novelty of our naval architects," but it is no novelty with us. The Wampanoag was determined upon, and her keel was laid under the direction of our Navy Department six years ago. Like the Monitor, the Wampanoag has a special purpose. Her efficiency and power do not consist in her armament and heavy ordnance, but in her speed and alertness. It is not her mission to repel the assaults of the Black Prince or the La Gloire, but in the event of a war with Great Britain, or any other Power, a few such fast vessels as the Wampanoag would destroy her commerce and sweep it from the ocean.

As was the case with the monitors so with the Wampanoag. Some of our naval men have taken exceptions to her engines and boilers, which occupy so much space, and the officers are, in consequence, restricted in their quarters. It has been stated, though it is hoped incorrectly, that the naval authorities at Washington have undertaken, without warrant or appropriation, to reduce the boiler capacity of the fast steamers, and at the same time increase their weight by a spar deck—an alteration which involves great expense to do a great injury. Such a proceeding would reduce the speed of the vessel to only about ten knots, would change entirely her character and impair her efficiency without adding to her fighting capacity. All that would be gained by this emasculation would be a little extra comfort to the officers. Such a national blunder would bring upon us humiliation, would be an abandonment of a sagacious policy, considerately adopted by the Department when exempt from technical influence and professional prejudice or partiality, without any adequate return. Our men-of-war are built for fighting purposes, and not for the ease and pleasure of the officers who have them in charge. Neither the efficiency nor power of a man-of-war should be sacrificed for comfort, although all wish well to officers and crews.

But the following extracts from the London Times of Aug. 26, to which reference is made, show how promptly the British naval authorities detected and adopted the American idea of speed in naval vessels for aggressive purposes—making that class of cruisers infinitely more formidable in the destruction of enemy's commerce than the most formidable iron-clads:

"At the close of the Crimean war we indulged ourselves in a pardonable display of the maritime glories of the Empire. Never in modern times had there been seen so magnificent an array of fighting ships as took place in the naval review, and it appeared to all as if our supremacy at sea was as clear as in the days of NELSON. But the foresight of mortals is short. At that very moment an idea was germinating which presently reduced our fleets to little better than floating lumber. Those screw two-deckers had but a few months' life before them, and then our boasted 'reserves' sunk into worthlessness, and left us on a level only with second or third rate Powers, to begin our armament anew. In the year 1859 the Gloire was launched to "take possession of the sea." We resisted the warning for a time, as did other nations also, but the action between the Merrimac and the Monitor soon brought conviction to our minds, and a real 'reconstruction' of the British navy from its very foundations was the inevitable result. Ten years have now passed, and a survey of our position is favorably suggested by such an event as the Admiralty cruise.

The knightly armor of the Middle Ages was gradually improved, as everybody knows, into no armor at all, and by the side of the ponderous and almost impregnable Monarch there lies a ship built without any protection but her speed. The Inconstant is the latest novelty of our naval architects—a vessel of no less than of no burden and most formidable armament, but fitted only to go through the water at a prodigious rate. She is probably the fastest man-of-war afloat, and, therefore, when she does not choose to fight she can always run. It is very strange, however, to observe that fast unarmored frigates may yet, perhaps, be included in our reserves, as before."

The immense ravages of the revolutionists as well as the Spanish troops, in Cuba threaten not only to render that rich and fertile island a profitless possession to Spain but to destroy its productive power for some time after the close of hostilities. For nearly a year, mills, houses and plantations, as well as crops, have been sacrificed to the fury of the belligerents, until the whole Eastern half of the island has become a scene of desolation. The Western half of the island—which is the wealthiest and most populous—has thus far, in great measure, escaped these ravages; but with the progress of events here also, one locality after another is made to suffer. Throughout a great part of the island, the negroes are of course demoralized, so far as labor is concerned; and it will take years of freedom, or of repressive tyranny, to bring them up to their former position as producers. Such is the extraordinary fertility of Cuba, and such the generosity of Nature there, that it will suffer less severely and less enduringly than most other countries would suffer from the destruction of crops and products; but the injury to labor, machinery, organization and capital will be felt more deeply than in countries differently situated. Whatever be the political fate of Cuba hereafter, it will be the hard labor of years to recover her industrial fortunes.

The Democratic Convention which met yesterday at Syracuse, renominated all the present Democratic State officers; W. W. WRIGHT for Canal Commissioner, and FORDIS LAPLIN for State Prison Inspector. It also bestowed a gratuitous kick at the Fifteenth Amendment.

The country party officered the Convention, and controlled its proceedings. The Tammany section played the walking gentleman, a very different part from that for which they were undersecored a week ago by their metropolitan prints. JOHN A. LOTT, of Brooklyn, and ROBERT EARL, of Herkimer, are nominated for the Court of Appeals—both reputable men.

We give in another column the terms of an arrangement entered into last evening by the delegates of the several Republican primary organizations of this City. They promise harmony, and an end to the treachery which cost us our State ticket at the last election. We have now a chance to recover the State, and bring the Federal and State Governments once more into line. If our Convention will nominate good men next Wednesday, we shall enter the contest under excellent auspices.

There is reason to hope that the taxables of this City will have half a million of dollars less to pay for the support of their public schools during the year 1870 than they have been accustomed to pay for several years past. So, at least, we are assured by whispers from the Special Committee of the Board of Education, who are now engaged in examining the whole public school system, with a view to such a reduction of its expenditures as will not impair its efficiency. The new Board has suffered considerable embarrassment in its efforts at retrenchment, owing to the fact that all of the contracts up to May next had been entered into by their predecessors.

What is Commercial Paper?

There are few classes of cases in law which require closer discriminations or greater care or accuracy than those which turn on the definition of words or phrases; and there have been many cases of great interest which involved nothing more. A recent important insurance case turned on the question whether an earthquake was an "accident" or a "circumstance." A recent life insurance case turned on the meaning of the word "in," the question being whether the insured died "in the known violation of law." Another case of the same kind will be found in our legal columns this morning, involving the question as to what the Bankrupt law means by "commercial paper." The decision, however, does not lay down any general definition of the term. It seems to hold simply that a note which is given for borrowed money is not commercial paper, and that the failure to pay such a note is not an act of bankruptcy. The Judge says that the question is not affected by the object for which the money was borrowed. But if two men buy goods, and one gives his note for them, and the other gives his note for money which he borrows to pay for them, why should not one note be commercial paper as well as the other?

Inquiries at the Methodist Book Concern, in relation to the mismanagement of its affairs, disclose the fact that the frauds to which we alluded in Tuesday's TIMES were confined to employes of the institution, and in no respect compromise its heads.

The amount, as we have already stated, is not yet—perhaps may never be—fully ascertained; but that it has been large, and that the abstractions had continued through a series of years, is conceded.

We presume the Committee will direct an examination of the situation, if they have not already instituted one, which will be in due time submitted to the public.

We are happy to learn that the financial condition of the institution is not in the least affected by these losses, they having been distributed through a series of years.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

Mrs. SCOTT-SIDDONS arrived in this City yesterday, by the steamer Scotia.

Rev. Dr. MCCLINTOCK and family returned from abroad yesterday, after an absence of about three months. The doctor is in good health and will at once resume his duties as President of the Drew Theological Seminary.

The news comes from the Isle of St. Tropez that M. DEMOSTHENE OLLIVIER, the father of M. EMILE OLLIVIER, has just died in the arms of his son. He was of Jewish origin, and was a sturdy and most honest Republican of 1848. It was owing to his influence as a member of the Constituent Assembly that EMILE OLLIVIER, when a striping of 21, was appointed Prefect of Marseilles, with unlimited powers. DEMOSTHENE was put down on the blackest of all the lists of the proscribed in 1851, and it was only by extraordinary exertions of Prince NAPOLEON, who stretched his father's influence to the utmost, that he escaped being transported to Cayenne.

Messrs. PETERSON & BROTHERS have just published Mr. ADOLPHUS TROLLOPE'S new novel, Dream Numbers, and a new edition of the Baroness TAUTPHŒUS' popular story, The Initials.

Miss CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN is said to have written a novel, but to have determined to follow the Horatian plan, and keep it a few years longer, to make up the nine, before publication. From this it will be inferred that Miss CUSHMAN is not dead, as has been reported, although it is doubtful whether she will, as also reported, return to the stage.

A great point of controversy just now in fashionable and artistic circles refers to the comparative beauty of Mr. FAGNANI'S Nine Muses. We can vouch for it that each of them is lovely enough to occasion a new Trojan war, and that either, in the absence of the others, might stand as a national ideal for the genius of America.

A new work on the topics of the Mill-Bushnell controversy is said to be contemplated by certain writers of both sexes who are prominent in the Woman's Rights movement, the plan being to combine their talents after the manner of the celebrated Essays and Reviews.

A gentleman by the name of BURTT claims, in a letter to the London Times, to have discovered a signature of SHAKESPEARE to add to the authenticated six which are known to exist. As Secretary of the Royal Archæological Society, this gentleman had a small volume placed in his hands by a clergyman at Bury St. Edmonds in July last. This book contains the signature in question, and the following is Mr. BURTT'S description of it:

"It is an Amsterdam edition of the works of OVID, (in royal 32mo.) beautifully printed in 1630. The second leaf from the beginning is cut down all round, covered with parchment on one side, and on it are pasted the signatures of 'HUGH MIDDLETON,' and 'JOHN DRYDEN.' Turning on a few pages more, another leaf is found similarly treated, and on it pasted a piece of paper the entire size of the parchment, on which are the words, 'thyne Sweetneste, W. SHAKSPEARE, Stratfordie, Manche 24,' in the handwriting of the latter part of the sixteenth century. This was protected with silver paper pasted in. The writing was faint, and not easy to read; but it had to me a very genuine look, though smaller and neater in character than what I could recollect of that of our great dramatist. The paper also looked quite of the same date. The history of the book is this. About twenty-eight years ago an elder brother of the present owner (Rev. HERBERT HAWKINS, rector of Beyton) bought it of a second-hand bookseller for the sake of DRYDEN'S autograph. Turning over the pages he came to the autograph of SHAKESPEARE. This he showed to some friends, who 'pooh-poohed' it, and so it was consigned to retirement. The present owner became the possessor of the volume after his brother's death about five years ago. He had always been impressed with a belief in the genuineness of SHAKESPEARE'S signature, but did nothing with it till he heard of the Museum which the Archæological Institute was forming at Bury, which he thought a good opportunity for bringing it forward."

Mr. BURTT has given the case careful examination, and in his letter, which is long and able, he sets forth the grounds on which he has arrived at the conviction that the signature is genuine.

ART.

Mr. FAGNANI'S much talked of pictures, the "Nine Muses," were viewed on Tuesday at No. 23 Fifth-avenue, by a numerous circle of friends, and they are now announced at the same place for public exhibition. As most people are by this time aware, the pictures are portraits of young American ladies who are celebrated for their personal beauty, the costumes and accessories being of appropriate classical designs. Mr. FAGNANI has displayed considerable industry in the design and elaboration of these works of art, and the singular fitness in each particular style for the ideal it has been selected to apply is generally acknowledged. Each fair young face and bust seems native to ancient Greece rather than to this Western world, and in no case is there any suggestion of our later days to prompt an envious observer to hint that part of the picture is modern and the rest antique. In many respects MR. FAGNANI'S work deserves and will command almost unqualified praise. His idea has been a happy one and we should say it must prove abundantly successful. None can find fault, in general, with his mechanism, and although some of these figures may be thought a trifle more chalky or less perfectly drawn than some of the clever artist's finest portraits, there is so much about them that is commendable that we may fairly withhold criticism. As a representative exhibition of a group of America's loveliest daughters the "Nine Muses" are unrivaled; and we cannot doubt they will attract all the admiration that the charming originals and their fortunate painter deserve.

AMUSEMENTS.

Musical.

LA JUIVE AT THE ACADEMY.

The disposition of the public to sustain Grand Opera was last night clearly shown by the fact that in spite of the excessively unpleasant weather, an audience more than responsible, both in numbers and character, assembled at the Academy of Music to witness the first representation of the new French company in "La Juive." A first night for such an opera, with new artists in a strange land, is a very trying thing; so trying that it behooves those who are called upon to express critical opinions of the result, to make liberal allowance for possible embarrassments, and to give ungrudged praise for that which is unmistakably deserving. In such a spirit we would fain say all of encouragement that in fairness and candor may be said without imparting false impressions that might do injustice alike to the artists and to the public. And first let us say that the performances of "La Juive" last night was a thoroughly honest and conscientious one. Everybody concerned, principals, chorus, orchestra, ballet, even supernumeraries seemed to strive to do their best, and the general effect in this regard was harmonious and satisfactory. The orchestra and chorus were efficient and numerous; the stage management was worthy of all praise, and there were surprisingly few mishaps to mar the even tenor of an opera, which is perhaps one of the three most difficult to render on the lyric stage. Of the acting and singing of the principals we are constrained to speak with some qualification. They are all well-schooled and painstaking artists, and we doubt not they will make their way with the public to positions of enviable esteem. Their artistic worthiness should be conceded with little reserve. We speak, of course, more especially of the four leading singers of the occasion, the lack of exertion on whose part prevented enthusiasm last night from rising to furor. It is undeniable, however, that the first general effect in each case was one of disappointment. While it was clear that the artists thoroughly knew their business, and were anxious to reach their highest point of interpretation there was yet felt by the audience a sense of deficiency at times, even when they were most anxious to be pleased. The reason is tolerably plain. The artists come from a good school, but hardly from the very best school. Their voices are slightly worn, or seemed so, and they were undertaking very ambitious work in a strange theatre, and in the presence of a strange audience. As they proceeded and warmed to their tasks, however, we are bound to say that these drawbacks in a measure disappeared. The first decidedly favorable effect was produced by M. TASSOU'S air in the first act, and the beautiful concerted piece with chorus that ends that act was received with hearty applause. In the second act the famous trio, sung by Mme. FAUCHERETTI and MM. TAGARDI and MEYER, was also warmly received, and thereafter the singers seemed to get on better terms with their public, and to please them throughout. All the scenes were excellently set, the dressing and equipping of the opera everything that could be desired, and the accord between chorus and orchestra showed commendably careful rehearsals. The ballet was scarcely as rich in female loveliness as New-York has lately been accustomed to expect; but this was really about the only shortcoming toward the perfection of the ensemble. There can be no doubt of this, that, in spite of errors of omission or commission, a large number of the audience left the Academy last night highly delighted with the entertainment; and that they were no more delighted than we shall be if able hereafter to speak of the efforts of this deserving company in terms of more decided commendation than a first hearing has enabled us to do. "Les Mousquetaires de la Reine" is to be given by them on Friday night, and this will perhaps afford us the desired opportunity. There is good reason to hope so too. For a performance is not often seen that, beginning rather ominously, and pleasing more and more until the audience are fairly satisfied, concludes by getting them quite enthusiastic at the end, and this was just the case with "La Juive" last evening. Under such circumstances, much good may be expected from the future, for a continuance in such progression can end in nothing short of unqualified success.

"MARITANA" AT THE FRENCH THEATRE.

A very pleasant representation of WALLACE'S "Maritana" was given last evening at the French Theatre, by the artistes who, during the past week, sang in three different operas. That a fourth one, familiar though it be to several of the singers, should be produced so soon after the opening of the season, speaks well for the industry of the company. And its thoroughly satisfactory performance bears testimony to talent as well. The dramatic qualities of the story, and the excellence of the score, were both done full justice to. So strongly does the play of "Don Cæsar de Bazan" always touch the sympathies of an audience, and so happily has WALLACE illustrated it with music of a popular order, that the opera always commands attention, even when interpreted passably only. The artists of Mme. PAREPA'S troupe bring to its execution unusually fresh and cultured voices, and some of them a greater willingness to act than is usually to be recorded in a similar connection. Mr. CASTLE has notably improved in the latter respect, and although his embodiment of the lyric Don Cæsar will not efface from one's memory a remembrance of the great actors who have been identified with the part, it is commendable as exhibiting spirit and activity, besides being deserving of all praise for its vocal merits. THE CUBAN QUESTION.

The Discussion in the British Press Continued—Estimate of the Consequences of a War Between Spain and the United States.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The Times this morning says: "The Spaniards have found their advantage in a bold display of patriotism and national courage. They met an imagined affront with immediate defiance, though their threatened adversary is ten times more powerful than themselves. General SICKLES is manifestly alarmed at the result of his proceedings, and has requested further instructions. Pending a reply from Washington, he desires to withdraw his note. If this is actually the position of the case, Spain owes it to her own fearlessness, which may savor of unreason, but does not partake of the nature of bravado. She has declared that if driven to extremity she will fight. No doubt she will. For her to gain advantage by doing so is out of the question, but we matters stand she would lose less by war than her adversary. America may fairly decline an easy victory on such onerous and partial terms. The people and Government of Spain are resolved not to part with Cuba without a struggle. A contest would only result in the sacrifice of Cuba, coupled with either but slighter losses. General SICKLES expected no such resistance as his note provoked. Possibly, in the face of such opposition, his proceedings may be qualified or repudiated by his Government. It is believed that he exceeds his authority, and that America is not responsible for his act."

The Standard thinks the loss of Cuba, and perhaps Porto Rico, would be the certain result of a war with the United States. Here the mischief for Spain would end, after some months of combat, for she must agree to peace. But this mischief would bring with it no corresponding good to the United States. War would cause serious interruption of her commerce, and result in the wholesale destruction of her shipping. It is not probable that the American Government will interfere any further in the affairs of Cuba.

Correction of a False Report—The Feeling in Washington Toward Spain and Cuba—The Spanish Naval Armament.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The false and absurd reports telegraphed from this city yesterday regarding Spanish affairs and Minister SICKLES evidently caused some excitement in distant cities, as dispatches have been received to-day making anxious inquiries in regard to the situation. All that can be said is that these stories about the indignation of the Administration at General SICKLES' course, his alleged recall, or the additional statement that he has exceeded his instructions, are wholly and absolutely fabrications out of whole cloth, and known to be such in most cases by the persons who sent them. Briefly, so far as the Government is informed, there is nothing new in the Spanish situation. There is pending a friendly offer of mediation. It has not been finally replied to by the Spanish Government, and it may be said that the prospect of its success is apparently less promising than it was. General SICKLES has not been censured; he had not exceeded his instructions at last accounts, and I have good reason to believe that the note which seems to have caused so much frenzy in Spain is simply a request upon the Spanish Government for a direct answer upon the pending propositions. General SICKLES is credited here in official quarters with having thus far acted with excellent judgment and sound discretion, and the feeling among the members of the Administration is as quiet as a Summer morning. Not one of them deems war probable, much less desirable, and nothing but the preservation of the national honor will induce the Government to embark in a warlike contest with even so weak a nation as Spain. It is well understood here, especially in official circles, that the rage and excitement in Spain over the assumed contents of our Minister's letter, is instigated by SERRANO, PRIM and other magnates, for the purpose of uniting and solidifying the Spanish people by the prospect of a foreign war. They hope thereby to divert the attention of their subjects from their own quarrels and differences, and, having nothing to lose, it is comparatively safe for them to indulge in a little game of bluster.

In view of all the talk about Spanish matters and the possibility of war, the following list of the Spanish navy becomes interesting. It is based on official data: Seven iron-clad frigates, mounting a total of 197 guns. These vessels have a four-inch plate armor; two or three of them are unwieldy and unseaworthy. The Victoria is the best of the class, but none of them could resist our fifteen-inch guns for an hour. Two iron-clad corvettes, 26 guns; 10 wooden screw frigates, 231 guns; (several of these vessels are worthless;) 3 side-wheel steamers, 56 guns; 4 sloops and brigs, 64 guns; 26 small screw schooners, 48 guns; 10 side-wheel schooners, 18 guns; 16 steam transports, 5 sailing transports, 15 screw gunboats, on Custom-house duty on the coast, one gun each.

THE RELIGIOUS SITUATION.

An Opinion on the Object of the Ecumenical Council—Father Hyacinthe's Position and its Results.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—The Journal des Débats looks upon the religious situation as one fraught with serious consequences. It is said the coming Council at Rome will meet only to ratify the decisions of a most ultramontane committee. But the attitude of certain German and American Bishops, and the complaints of illustrious French ecclesiastics, show that the labors of the Council will not be so easy and direct as was anticipated. If the Syllabus triumphs, it will be with a struggle, and the triumph can only be ephemeral.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The Daily Telegraph estimates the declaration of Father HYACINTHE as merely one of the many manifestations revealing the commotion in the Roman Catholic Church, which promises to make the Ecumenical Council the occasion of anything but spiritual peace.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—Le Temps says the noble and courageous answer of Père HYACINTHE will create an immense effect, appearing as it has on the eve of a great Council.

Le Siècle is of the opinion that the attitude of the eloquent and earnest preacher-monk must exercise a great influence in the present crisis of the Church.

SPAIN.

The Subject of Choosing a King—Prince Napoleon Spoken of—Disturbances at Tarragona—A Treaty of Commerce with England.

MADRID, Sept. 22.—The first subject of discussion before the Cortes on reassembling will be the choosing of a King. Of the candidates thus far suggested, the King of Portugal seems to be the favorite. Prince NAPOLEON is spoken of as a candidate.

General PIERRAD arrived at Tarragona on Tuesday, and the Republicans made a great demonstration in his honor. Much excitement prevailed, and there were some disturbances in the streets, during which the Secretary of the Governor was killed. The Government authorities then took vigorous steps to restore order. Many persons were arrested, the Republican clubs dispersed, and the Volunteers of Liberty were disarmed. An order has been issued for the street of PIERRAD. A treaty of commerce between England and Spain will soon be completed.

TARRAGONA, Sept. 22.—General PIERRAD has fled from Tarragona to Valencia. It is reported that he was stopped at Tortosa and arrested.

Regent SERRANO will leave the city, probably this week, for the baths of Alhama.

Return of General Prim from Madrid—Action of the Ministry.

MADRID, Sept. 22.—General PRIM has returned from France. Soon after his arrival a Cabinet council was held, at which it was received to use every effort to save Cuba and to dispatch more troops to the island. The Tarragona affair was also discussed, and strong measures were proposed for the preservation of public order.

FRANCE.

Anniversary of the First Republic—The Emperor.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—A banquet and fête were given in this city yesterday in commemoration of the 21st of September, 1792.

The Emperor presided at the Council of Ministers to-day.

Evidence has been been discovered which leads to the belief that the woman and five children who were discovered dead this week were murdered by the husband and eldest son of the family.

THE PEACE CONGRESS.

Opening of the Sessions at Lausanne, in Switzerland—A Toast to America.

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, Sept. 22.—The Universal Peace Congress is now in session here. Yesterday a banquet was given the delegates. VICTOR HUGO was present, and offered a toast to the Republic of the United States. He said he felt sure that, imitating the example of America, Europe would eventually become a federative republic.

TURKEY AND EGYPT.

The Sultan Refuses to Make Concessions—The Loan Point Insisted On.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 22.—The Sublime Porte persists in its demands on the Viceroy of Egypt, in regard to the power of the latter to raise loans, and refuses to make any concessions.

CUBA.

A Skirmish Near Sancti-spiritus.

HAVANA, Sept. 21—Evening.—The Spanish troops had a skirmish with the rebels near Sancti-spiritus. Sixteen of the latter were killed.

CANADA.

Double Murder in New-Brunswick—Two Persons Killed by Lightning and an Invalid Burned to Death.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Sept. 22.—Further investigations concerning the discovery of the skeletons of a woman and child near Loch Lomond, leave no doubt that a double murder has been committed. A man named KANE is in custody on suspicion of being the criminal, and the bodies are supposed to be those of his wife and child.

A terrific thunder storm occurred at Yarmouth, N. S., yesterday. The house of JOSEPH HAMILTON was struck by the lightning, and Mr. HAMILTON and his wife instantly killed. The house was set on fire, and a bedridden daughter perished in the flames.

A Shocking Scene at an Execution—The Knights of St. Crispin and the Catholic Church.

QUEBEC, Sept. 22.—POITRAS, the murderer of QUELLETTE, was executed at Murray Bay on Monday. Up to his last moments he persisted in declaring his innocence, and refused the consolation of religion until brought face to face with his fate on the scaffold, when he confessed his guilt and repented. The execution was characterized by a painful and brutal incident. The rope was left too long, so that when the trap fell POITRAS fell to the ground on his knees. He was taken up again and the rope shortened, so that when he fell the second time the law was vindicated. The executioner, from Montreal, was said to have been intoxicated at the time of the execution.

Messrs. WOODLEY have discharged from their boot manufactory all the men belonging to the St. Crispin Society. A pastoral letter was read in the Roman Catholic Churches condemning the St. Crispin Association, and refusing absolution to those of its members who belong to the Catholic Church. The St. Crispin Society are on a strike in Montreal and Toronto.

An Exhibition of Intense Loyalty—A United States Flag Pulled Down.

LONDON, Ontario, Sept. 22.—An enormous crowd visited this city to-day. Fully 20,000 strangers arrived by special trains. Addresses were presented to Governor-General YOUNG by the City Council and Board of Trade at his hotel.

At 2 o'clock Prince ARTHUR, with Governor-General YOUNG, rode to the Industrial Exhibition grounds, where addresses were presented by the Agricultural and Arts Societies. The Prince and Sir JOHN YOUNG then went through the exhibition, where an enormous crowd was present.

An American flag, which had been hung in the decorations, was pulled down and torn to pieces at 9 o'clock. Much excitement prevailed.

THE PACIFIC COAST.

The Astronomical Expedition to Siberia Unsuccessful—The Sun Observed During the Eclipse.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—The United States steamer Mohican returned from Siberia to-night with Professors HALL and ROGERS, of the United States Naval Observatory at Washington, who went North to observe the eclipse. The expedition was a decided failure. The steamer arrived in Plover Bay, July 20, and anchored in Emma Harbor. The astronomical party erected an observatory at Napkum Spit, which Mr. ROGERS took as a station, while Mr. HALL proceeded to the chief place selected for observing the eclipse. The weather was favorable until half an hour before "the contact," when dense clouds obscured the sun, and this condition of things continued until half an hour after "the egress," when it cleared off as before.

A FEARFUL TRAGEDY.

Murder, Arson and Suicide in Indiana—An Old Farmer the Criminal.

MADISON, Ind., Sept. 21.—Yesterday afternoon WM. MOODY, an old and respected farmer, murdered his wife, dragged the body from the house, set fire to the dwelling and outbuildings, standing guard over the building until it was consumed. He then shot himself dead. He would allow no one to interfere to save anything. A considerable amount of money was burned.

Another Large Donation from Mr. Peabody.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 22.—GEORGE PEABODY visited the Peabody Institute to-day during a meeting of the trustees, and made an additional donation of $200,000 of Tennessee six per cent. bonds, and $100,000 Virginia State six per cent. bonds. This sum is designated by the donor for the erection of a building similar to and adjoining the present Institute, the site for which has already been purchased. Any remainder of the above amount, after the construction of the new building, is to be applied to a gallery of paintings and sculpture. Mr. PEABODY, in his letter making the donation, refers to the pecuniary difficulties of Tennessee, but expresses confidence in the great national resources of the State and the high sense of honor of her people, and advises the trustees to keep these bonds for the present, as they are increasing in value, and, when necessary, to dispose of at the highest price the United States bonds held by the trustees.

FIRES.

Oil Works Near Pittsburg Destroyed—Three Boys Burned to Death in Cincinnati—Stores and Public Halls Burned at Hemlock Lake, N. Y.

OIL CITY, Penn., Sept. 22.—There is a large fire in the Standard Oil Works, near Pittsburg. It began about 9:30 o'clock this morning, and is still raging. All efforts to extinguish the fire have so far proved fruitless, and it is thought the entire works will be destroyed. The loss is not yet known.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 22.—A frame house on Central-avenue was burned last night. It was occupied as a shop, dwellings and a saloon. Loss, $14,000; insured for $4,000. Three young boys, named MONTAG, were burned to death.

ROCHESTER, Sept. 22.—The dry-goods store of MORGAN & STEVENS, the drug store of Dr. VAN FARREN, and GILBERT & FOX, the fancy goods store of Miss HUDSON, the Post Office and the Odd Fellows' and Good Templars' halls in the village of Hemlock Lake, were destroyed by fire yesterday. Loss, $15,000; partially insured.

THE UNIVERSALISTS.

Second Day of the Convention at Buffalo—The Centennial.

BUFFALO, Sept. 22.—This morning, at 9 o'clock, the Council resumed its session. The Committee on Centennial Work report as follows: The year 1870 will be the centenary of the Universalist denomination in America. It is recommended, first, that the parishes pay off the outstanding debts. Second, That all the needed improvements and repairing of churches, or the building of new ones, be done in the course of a year. Third, That a general plan of missionary work be inaugurated. Fourth, That a publication fund be raised. Fifth, That as a special memorial offering the sum of $200,000 be raised and vested in the General Convention for denominational uses. The Committee also recommended that mass meetings be held in the Spring of 1870 in Boston, New-York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Chicago. Also, that the first Sunday in June be set apart for special memorial service in all the churches. The afternoon was devoted to the discussion of this report.

The Brooks Assassination in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—At the hearing in the Brooks case to-day KEENAN was discharged, and HAMILTON and ATWELL remanded. All of the others implicated in the affair were released on bail. BROOKS failed to recognise any of the parties under arrest as being present when he was shot.

United States of Colombia—The Presidential Election.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Monday, Sept. 13, 1869.

Dates from Bogota are to Aug. 18 by mail, and by private correspondence to a later date. The result of the examination of the votes given for the President of the Republic should already have been published in the State of Boyaca, but was not. Conservatives and Liberals are disputing the triumph of their candidates. It is believed the examination will decide the election of SALGAR. The State of Santander has voted in favor of SALGAR.

Southern Centuries—Earthquakes in the West—Shocks at Arica, Tacna and in Southern Peru.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Monday, Sept. 13, 1869.

The steamship Pacific arrived on the morning of the 3d inst., bringing us late dates from the west coast of South America. The almost daily occurrence of earthquakes seemed to prostrate business and send terror into the hearts of all. It is the all-absorbing topic in Peru. The Panama Mail says:

"From the west coast of South America the intelligence in connection with the predictions of the German Astronomer, FALB, is more startling than we were prepared to expect. From almost every part of the coast of Peru we hear of a succession of earthquakes, which, in point of frequency and force, are only second to the appalling convulsions of August last. At Arica, on the 19th ult., not less than forty shocks of earthquake occurred within the twenty-four hours, causing extreme terror to the inhabitants, and obliging many to flee from the city to the interior. On the night of the 20th, at 10:30, a terrific movement of the earth took place, almost rivaling the fearful shocks of last year. Later, during the same night and the following morning, less violent shocks occurred at frequent intervals, accompanied by successive subterraneous noises, which struck additional alarm into the minds of the people. Up to the latest date (the 22d ult.) Arica and the surrounding country was in an almost perpetual state of movement, either oscillatory or undulatory, and more than half the families had fled to the neighboring valleys.

"The City of Tacna, besides experiencing an incredible number of earthquakes previous to the 20th, was, on the night of that day, visited by a similar shock to that which took place at Arica ten minutes later. The citizens fled to the public squares and took refuge in the widest streets, erecting temporary huts, in which to await with comparative safety the threatening scenes to the previous alarming indications.

"At Tarapacá and Iquique earthquakes had been also unusually numerous and severe, causing the same excessive terror and alarm among the inhabitants. Arequipa, also, among the many earthquakes which its late history recorded, makes particular mention of three unusually violent shocks on the night of the 20th, rivaling in force, so says the Boletin of that city, the convulsions of the memorable 19th of August, 1868. There, as in Islay and nearly every Peruvian city and seaport, the almost incessant movement caused principally by the inquietude of the earth, but intensified by the prognostications of FALB, which are to a certain extent considered by many to be partially verified, notwithstanding the slight discrepancy of dates.

"Much alarm has been commenced in Lima and Callao by the news of earthquakes from the seaports and cities of Southern Peru, but up to the latest dates no very considerable shocks had occurred at either place. Nevertheless, much of the consternation prevalent in the South is shared by the inhabitants of the capital and port, so much so that many, including foreigners, are making preparations to be absent at the time that M. FALB's predictions are expected to be verified. It is observable that the withstanding the violence of some of the numerous shocks of earthquake which have recently taken place in Peru, no corresponding movement of the sea has occurred similar to that of 1868. In the southern ports of Chili, however, notably Talcahuano and Tomé, the tides for three or four days, rose and fell in a manner unprecedented, running in and out more irregularly and receding and advancing as much as two or three times within an hour."

TRAGEDY IN BROOKLYN.

An Insane Mother Hacks her Son's Head to Pieces with an Ax—Struggle Between the Women and her Daughter.

Mrs. CATHARINE HALPIN, residing at No. 214 East Warren-street, while in a temporary fit of insanity, at 3 P. M. yesterday, assaulted her son EDWARD, 8 years of age, with an ax, inflicting ten wounds, any one of which was sufficient to cause death. The circumstances of the fearful tragedy are about as follows: Mrs. CATHARINE HALPIN is the wife of an industrious and sober carpenter, with whom she has lived in peace and comfort for nearly twenty-four years. All the family relations, so far as is known, during that time, have been of the most amicable character, the children, those who were spared, growing up in dutiful respect and obedience to their parents. Mrs. HALPIN was predisposed to temporary violent mental insanity, and on previous occasions it was necessary to keep her under strict guard to prevent her doing injury to herself or others. The first occasion of this kind was about fourteen years ago, just after she had given birth to a child, since dead, when she had to be strictly watched. Since then time the malady, which lurked in her system, at different times manifested itself in her extraordinary conduct, but she was closely watched until the temporary danger had passed away.

Yesterday afternoon she was seized with one of these wild fits. Her boy, EDWARD, was playing with his sister JANET, 10 years old, and his sister, ALICE, about 17 years old, was engaged in her regular household duties. The mother, with apparent kindly desire, requested ALICE to leave the kitchen and go to bed. The unsuspecting girl complied. JANET happened to step out into the yard for the moment, and it was then that the demon spirit gained the mastery of the mother. She caught up an ax, which was in sight, and commenced hacking EDWARD's head with it until, having dealt ten fearful and deathly strokes, the child lay on the floor lifeless and gory. ALICE sprang from her couch and ordered the apartment where the tragedy had just been completed, when the mother asked her to conceal herself beneath the bed. This the girl refused to do, and the result was a desperate struggle between her and her demented mother. ALICE screamed, but no help came from neighbors. She escaped from the house and ran to the school-house for her sister MARY, and informed her of what had taken place. These information of the awful occurrence was given at the Forty-third Precinct Station-house, when Sergeant GROVER and two other officers proceeded to the house in East Warren-street. On arriving they found Mrs. HALPIN in possession. She informed them that the deed had been committed by two women, one of whom had jumped out of the window, while the other fled by the door. The unfortunate woman had taken her shawl, and with it had wiped the edge of the ax clean, collected the brains of the deceased boy, and deposited them in a bucket. The Police took possession of the premises, and removed the woman to the Station-house.

Coroner JOHNS will, to-day, hold an inquest.

THE REPUBLICAN COMMITTEES.

Harmony Restored—Basis of the Arrangement.

The Union Republican General Committee (Twenty-third-street) held an adjourned meeting last evening, at the hall corner of Twenty-third-street and Broadway, Mr. JOHN D. GEMILLY in the chair.

The report of Special Committees being in order, Mr. JAMES W. CULVER arose, and after giving a brief outline of the basis on which the Committee had agreed to unite with the Twenty-third and Twenty-eighth-street organizations, urged that it be adopted as the best that could be done, and in accepting which the regularity of the Twenty-third-street Committee was fully recognized, and harmony and efficiency restored to the party.

Mr. CULVER was followed by Mr. CHARLES S. SPENCER and General JOHN COCHRANE in very earnest speeches on the necessity of adopting the agreement as a whole, and with marked unanimity. The question being put to a vote, the following agreement was adopted without a dissenting voice, and amid general enthusiasm:

As a meeting of Committees appointed by the Republican General and Central Committees of the City of New-York, of which Messrs. GEDDLEY, BOOTH and KETCHUM are Presidents, it was agreed, first, that the delegation from the City of New-York to the State Convention shall be divided as follows, viz.: The Twenty-second-street organization shall be entitled to thirty of said delegates, and the other organizations represented in this conference shall be entitled to twenty-six, and said delegates may be selected, appointed or elected in such manner as the respective organizations may determine; also that the members of the State Central Committee to which the City of New-York is entitled shall be divided as follows, viz.: One-half to the organization known as the Twenty-second-street Committee, and the other half to the other organizations herein represented. Second, it is also agreed that all the organizations herein represented shall unite in a reorganization and reenrollment of the Republican voters of the City, for the purpose of forming new local organizations in the Assembly Districts, and a new General Committee; said reenrollment shall be made under the direction of four inspectors in each Assembly District, who shall be appointed by a Joint Committee of twelve, to be appointed or elected by the organizations herein represented, on or before the 10th day of October, 1869, six of whom shall be appointed by the Twenty-second-street organization, and six by the other organizations herein represented. It is understood and agreed that the Twenty-second-street organization shall have the appointment of two of the said inspectors, and the other organizations herein represented shall have the other two of said inspectors in each of said districts. Said Joint Committee of twelve shall, in addition to appointing inspectors as aforesaid, also act as a Board of Appeal in all matters of dispute between said inspectors, and shall have power to remove any of said inspectors for misconduct and fill all vacancies. The enrollment herein provided for shall be made on the evenings of Dec. 15 and 17, next ensuing, and the elections herein provided for shall be held on the evening of Dec. 20 next ensuing. The enrolling and voting places and books in both cases to be open from 7 o'clock to 9:30 o'clock, of which two days' notice shall be given in at least two Republican papers of the City, TIMES and TRIBUNE.

The inspectors so appointed as aforesaid shall cause the enrollment thus made by them to be printed in numbers sufficient to give to every person enrolled a copy of the same, and shall distribute them to the best of their ability. On the 23d December next ensuing, the said inspectors shall meet, (which meeting shall be advertised as aforesaid,) and shall hear all complaints in relation to the name of any person improperly on the roll; and if it shall appear by affidavit or other satisfactory evidence that such name is improperly on the roll, and that notice of the application to strike it therefrom has been served on him and he makes default; or proof is made that he cannot be found in the district in which he shall be enrolled, or in case the said person fails to satisfy said inspectors that his name ought to be continued on said roll, then the said inspectors shall have power, and it shall be their duty to strike such name from the roll.

At the close of the election, as herein provided, said inspectors shall declare in writing the result of such election, naming the officers of the local organizations and delegates to the General Committee thus elected, and on such declaration being made all other Republican organizations in said districts shall be disbanded.

Upon the assembling and organization of the delegates to the Central Committee elected as aforesaid, which shall take place on the evening of the first Thursday of January, 1870, the other General and Central Committees shall cease to exist.

This agreement to be reported to the Committee of Appointment by the last State Convention, and of which Mr. MADDEN is Chairman, to be by said Committee reported to the next State Convention for approval.

Signed, on behalf of the Twenty-second-street Committee, John H. White, Sinclair Tousey and Ira O. Miller; on behalf of the Twenty-third-street Committee, James W. Booth, T. E. Stuart, David Miller, E. Delafield Smith and Thomas Murphy; on behalf of the Twenty-eighth-street Committee, Edgar Ketchum, Spencer Kirby and Norman Stratton.

On motion of Mr. LAWSON, it was

Resolved, That upon the reorganization of the Republican Party, the two members of said committee to which this Committee will be entitled to be recognized, and the Special Committee by the President and members of the General Committee of the several organizations, and such named persons shall be appointed by said Committee, viz.:

On motion of Mr. SPENCER, it was

Resolved, That the thirty delegates and alternates to the Union Republican State Convention, according to the organization hereinbefore recognized, be delegates and one alternate to each Assembly District to be selected from such Assembly District, and that the delegates at large be selected by a committee of one from each Assembly District, to be appointed by them when it adjourns, adjourn to Friday evening next, at the time the delegates to the Committee from the Assembly districts come to report the names of those selected by them for delegates and alternates under the above appointment, and also that the gentlemen whose names are so reported shall be appointed delegates and alternates, and shall be entitled to seats in said State Convention, and shall be so entitled by the officers of this Committee.

A Committee of twenty-one was appointed from each district to appoint the delegates at large. It was resolved that the Committee demand the restoration of Chas. ATTRIDGE to employment in the Navy-yard, from which he was recently discharged, and that a copy of the resolution be sent to the Secretary of the Navy.

The Committee then adjourned.

New Republican Central Committee.

The Union Republican Central Committee (new organization) held a meeting at Apollo Hall last evening, Mr. EDGAR KETCHUM presiding. A sharp and protracted discussion took place on the adoption of a report in relation to the reorganization of the Republican Party in this City. The report was supported by Messrs. McMULLEN, HOWE, RICHARDSON, TWEEDDLE, BERGSTON, KIMMELL, O'BRIEN, PINCKNEY, KETCHUM and others, but was opposed by Messrs. BARCOCK, WHITFIELD, HALL and HEBBE. It was finally adopted by a large majority. The report is the same as that adopted by the Twenty-third-street organization.

Explosive Oils—Another List of Places Where Bad Kerosene is Sold.

Dr. HARRIS, the Sanitary Superintendent, yesterday presented to the Board of Health the weekly record of results obtained under the supervision of the chemist in the laboratory of the Board with regard to explosive oils sold in this City and Brooklyn. It sets forth that there is evidence that small dealers carry on their own adulterations, and that the wholesale dealers are endeavoring to bring their oils up to the required standard of safety.

INCIDENTALS.

The record of the Sir John Franklin expedition was found on the California coast by Mr. JAMES DALY, of the firm of DALY & RODGERS, lumber merchants in San Buenaventura. Mr. DALY, walking on the beach, accidentally stumbled upon a battered leather bag, made of seal skin and closely fastened, and in that the paper was found.

General WILSON, who in the Spring of 1865 made an expedition through Alabama and Georgia, and struck what General SHERMAN officially pronounced "one of the best blows of the war at the waning strength of the Confederacy," has issued a call for a meeting of the "officers and soldiers of the Cavalry Corps, Military Division of the Mississippi," at Louisville, Ky., Nov. 17.

JOSEPH MESSNER, the Rochester wife murderer, received information from his counsel of the adverse decision of the Supreme Court in his case with considerable emotion, but before the interview terminated said "he did not care about the matter, although life was sweet to him; that the man who lost his money on his being a fool would lose it; he was ready to die," &c.

Republican papers in Ohio allege that General SAMUEL CLEMENS is organizing a secret political league in the interests of the Democratic Party in all the places in that State visited by him. It is called the Workingmen's League, and its object is to elect Democrats to the Legislature, and when that is impossible, to make pretended independent nominations.

The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser says that Dr. BREWER, of Westfield, was nominated for the Assembly by the Republicans of the Second District of Chautauqua County by a vote of forty to thirty-six; that the vote was made unanimous, and that after a recess of two hours the nomination of Dr. BREWER was reconsidered by the delegates then present, and MATTHEW P. HEMUS was nominated.

The Democratic State Central Committee of Pennsylvania have began issuing their stirring addresses again. One appeared yesterday. The peculiar force which was given to those of old by the practiced and skilled pen of WALLACE is, of course, wanting, but we are told that Mr. PACKER "will come to the performance of public duty, armed with integrity as with a garment," which is either a new kind of arm or a new use for a garment.

The Detroit Post is agitating the question whether a man farce the worse from the brutalities of civilization or the savagery of barbarism. It brings the sufferings of others to bear upon the question, and its perplexity is none the less.

Rev. J. B. BITTINGER, D.D., has declined the Presidency of Washington and Jefferson College at Washington, Penn., solely because he fears that he does not possess the practical business talent required for the reorganization of the college.

The Detroit papers report that Rev. S. M. FRELAND, of that city, in his sermon in favor of the restoration of capital punishment, contended that it is no argument against hanging that the innocent sometimes suffer—that that is an argument in favor of care, but it is better that some innocent persons should suffer than that the guilty should go unpunished.

Boston proposes to send its Treasurer to England to sign the city bonds which have been negotiated abroad. It is estimated that about five millions will be taken there. The Treasurer of Massachusetts has already gone to England to sign State bonds.

Captain E. B. WARD, of Detroit, who was stricken with paralysis last week, continues to improve in health, and many of the most unfavorable symptoms of his disease have left him.

The Lynchburg Republican has thrown aside its old type, which "has had to chronicle the most important scenes in the darkest and most eventful period of Virginia's history," and appears in an entire new dress, and much enlarged.

STRONG PEYTRE has been commissioned as Postmaster of the village of Pepperville, Nebraska. This reads like a joke, but it cannot be such, if "every joke has for its foundation an untruth," because it is a fact.

Washington is very much gratified at the announcement that its death-rate is no larger than that of New-York, and considerably less than that of England. The proposition to remove the capital is bringing out a vast amount of invaluable information about that city.

The City Council of Albany are taking steps to erect a monument to the memory of Major-General SCHUYLER, and have appointed a Committee, of which Major BLEECKER is chairman, to confer with his descendants on the subject.

The Atlanta (Ga.) Intelligencer complains that $600 and $1,000 bills are being sent there for the purchase of cotton, and it fears it is a Northern trick, resorted to for the purpose of endeavoring to break down the cotton market.

The steamship San Salvador took away from Savannah, on Saturday, 1,140 bales of upland cotton, and six bags of sea island, the largest cargo of cotton ever taken from that port by a regular coast line steamer.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

There were no suburban sales advertised for yesterday, and it is very fortunate there were none. The weather was rainy and gloomy, and a disappointment would have been inevitable. Thus far everything has been very favorable. Each sale has taken place at the time advertised. The days have been bright and clear, and not a cloud has occurred to mar the pleasures of the day. It is to be hoped that during the remainder of the season the auctioneers will be equally fortunate. A postponement is almost always followed by some unpleasant result. The people do not attend the second time as promptly as they did the first, do not bid as spiritedly, the edge of the appetite seems to have rubbed off, and the sale is comparatively flat and uninteresting. Last season two or three such disappointments occurred, and the sales following, though generally fair, were seldom equal to those which took place promptly at the time advertised.

To-day none will be made. Friday is not a favorite, and as Saturday is to real estate men a day of rest, no further country sales will be attempted this week. For next week several interesting sales are advertised, particulars of which will be found in our advertising columns.

The Exchange Sale-room, which for some time has been very quiet, is beginning to show some signs of life. The auctioneers are getting their stands and bulletins in order, and preparations are being made for a very lively Fall season. A few weeks hence, when the weather is cooler and country sales have ceased, stirring times may be expected in the old hall. It is scarcely probable that we shall have so great an excitement as attended the closing last Spring; yet there are many large and important sales to be made, and they will undoubtedly attract large audiences. Many of the old habitués already congregate together within the room to talk over what has been, speculate as to what will be and compare ideas generally. The general belief is, that the market will be less excited, and more firm and steady than it has been for some time past. Such a state of things is certainly greatly to be desired, and present appearances would seem to justify the belief that the opinion above expressed, and now entertained by so many of our sound and experienced men, will prove correct. If the improvement in the salesroom is as great as it has been in the country, all will have cause for congratulation.

THE CONVENTION.

Cuba be contounded for a moment with our whilom rebellion, having for its object the dismemberment of a Republic to found a new Power, with slavery as its declared corner-stone. For myself, I cannot doubt that, in the interest of both parties, Cuba and Spain, and in the interest of humanity also, the contest should be put upon the ground of humanity, where it has power—in the case of European nations, where the rights of man in this hemisphere and self-government were first asserted. A Congress, from Both sides, against these fundamental principles, is the true course for Spain to take; so, to my mind is the true course of the United States equally clear. It is to avoid involving ourselves in any way. Enough of war we have we had without heedlessly assuming another; enough has our commerce been driven from the ocean without heedlessly arousing another enemy. Five policies were open to us at the beginning of the insurrection. One was to unite our fortunes openly with the insurgents, assuming the responsibilities of such an alliance, with the hazard of letters of marque issued by Spain and open war. The other policy was to make Spain feel that we wish her nothing but good, and that especially since the expulsion of her royal dynasty, we cherish for her a cordial and kindly sympathy. It is said that republics are ungrateful, but I would not forget that, at the beginning of our revolutionary struggle, our fathers were aided by her money, as afterward by her arms, and that one of her great statesmen, FLORIDA BLANCA, lent his energies to the organization of that armed neutrality in Northern Europe which turned the scale against England. I say nothing of the motive by which Spain was then governed. It is something that in our day of need she lent us a helping hand. It is evident that, adopting the first policy, we should be powerless, except as an enemy. The second policy may enable us to exercise an important influence. The more I reflect upon the actual condition of Spain, the more I am satisfied that the true rule for us is non-intervention, except in the way of good offices. This ancient kingdom is now engaged in comedy and tragedy. You have heard of "Hunting the Slipper." The Spanish comedy is hunting a King. The Spanish tragedy is sending armies against Cuba. I do not wish to take part in the comedy or the tragedy. If Spain is wise she will give up both. Meanwhile, we have a duty which is determined by international law. To that venerable authority I regale. What that prescribes I follow.

RECOGNITION OF BELLIGERENCE.

By that law, as I understand it, nations are not left to any mere caprice. There is a rule of conduct which they must follow, subject always to just accountability where they depart from it. On ordinary occasions there is no question; for it is with nations as with individuals. It is only at a critical moment where the rule is obscure or precedents are uncertain, that doubt arises, as now, on the question of recognizing the belligerence of the Cuban insurgents. Here I wish to be explicit. Belligerence is a "fact," attested by evidence. If the "fact" does not exist, there is nothing to recognize. The fact should be prevented or imagined; it must be proved. No matter what our sympathy, what the extent of our desires, we must look at the fact. There may be insurrection without reaching this condition, which is, at least, the half-way house to independence. The insurgent States, in their war against Austria, did not reach it, although they had large armies in the field and KOSSUTH was their Governor; the Poles, in repeated insurrections against Russia, never reached it, although the conflict made Europe tremble; the Sepoys and Rajahs of India failed also, although for a time they held in check the whole English power; nor, in my opinion, did our rebels ever reach it, so far as to justify their recognition on the ocean. If the Cuban insurgents have yet reached this point, I have never seen the evidence. They are in arms, I know. But where are their cities, forts, provinces? Where is their Government? Where are their ports? Where are their tribunals of justice? and where are their Prize Courts? To put these questions is to answer them. How then is the "fact" of belligerence? There is another question in their place, which is with me final. Even if they comply within the prerequisites of international law, I am unwilling to make any recognition of them, so long as they continue to hold human beings as slaves. A decree in May last, purporting to be signed by Captaine, abolished slavery; but I am not sure of the validity of this decree, especially as another in July, purporting to come from the same authority, maintaining slavery. Until this is settled we must wait. On the recognition of belligerence there is much latitude of opinion—some asserting that a nation may take this step whenever it pleases; but we prefer the statement excludes the idea that belligerence is always a question of fact on the evidence. Undoubtedly an independent nation may do anything in its power whenever it pleases, but subject always to that accountability if another suffers from what it does. This may be illustrated in the most different cases of war, independence and belligerence. In each case the declaration is an exercise of high prerogative, inherent in every nation and kindred to that of eminent domain; but a nation declaring war without a just cause, becomes a wrong-doer; a nation recognizing independence where it does not exist in fact, becomes a wrong-doer also. On the latter point there is a want of precedents sufficiently clear and authoritative; but with me there is one rule in such a case, which I cannot disobey. In the absence of any precise injunction, I do not hesitate to adopt what I conceive to be the intention of international law which places war and all that make for war under the strongest restrictions—believing that in this way I shall best promote civilization and obtain new security for international peace.

RELATIONS WITH ENGLAND.

From the case of Spain I pass to the case of England. There for the present I content myself with a brief explanation. On this subject I have never broken silence except with pain, and I hope not to say anything now which shall augment difficulties, although, when I consider how British anger was aroused by an effort in another direction to do what I hesitate to call peaceful in character, I do not know that even these few words may not be misinterpreted. There can be no doubt that we received from England inexplicable wrong—greater I have often said, than was ever before received by one civilized Power from another since of another Power. I do not say this in bitterness, but in sadness. There can be no doubt that, through English complicity, our carrying trade was transferred to English bottoms; our foreign commerce sacrificed, while England gained what we lost; our blockade rendered more expensive, and generally that our war, with all its fearful cost of blood and treasure, was prolonged indefinitely. This terrible complicity began with a wrongful recognition of rebel belligerence, under the shelter of which pirate ships were built and supplies were sent forth. All this was at the very moment of our mortal agony, in the midst of a struggle for national life, and it was done in support of rebels whose single declared object of separate existence as a nation was slavery, being in this respect clearly distinguishable from a power where slavery is tolerated without being made the corner-stone. Such is the case. We shall fix the measure of this great accountability? For the present it is enough to expose it. I make no demand—not a dollar of money—not a word of apology. I show simply what England has done to us. It will be for her to determine what reparation she will offer, for it will be the American people to determine what reparation to require. On this head I content myself with the aspiration that out of it may come some enduring safeguard for the future, some landmark of humanity. But I have little hope of any adequate settlement until our case, which I have stated, has been heard. In all controversies the first stage of justice is to understand the case; and, sooner or later, England must understand our case. The English arguments, so far as argument can be found in the recent heats, have not in any respect impaired the justice of our complaint. Loudly is it said that there can be no sentimental damages or damages for wounded feelings, and then our case is dismissed as having nothing but this foundation. Now, without undertaking to say that there is no remedy in the case supposed, I wish it understood that our complaint is for damages to myself directly in England. If the amount is unprecedented, so also is the wrong. The scale of damages is naturally in proportion to the scale of operations. Who among us doubts that these damages were received? The records show how our commerce suffered, and witnesses without number testify how the war was prolonged. Ask any of our great Generals—ask SHERMAN, SHERIDAN, THOMAS, MEADE—ask GRANT. In view of this great wrong it is a disparagement of international law to say that there is no remedy. An eminent English Judge once pronounced from the bench that "the law is not to be found in every dog," but no sentiment is required in this case—nothing but simple justice. Then, it is said, why not consider our good friends in England, and especially those noble workingmen, who stood by us so bravely? We do consider them always, and give them gratitude for their generous sympathy. But they are not England. We trace no damages to them, nor to any class, high or low, but to England—corporate England—through whose Government we suffered. Then again, it is said, why not exhibit an account against France? For the good reason that while France acted with England in the recognition of rebel belligerence, no pirate ships or blockade runners were built under shelter of this recognition to prey upon our commerce. The two cases are wide asunder, and they are distinguished by two different phrases of the common law. The recognition of rebel belligerence by France was sometimes spoken of as a wrong without injury, but that same recognition in England was [illegible] a wrong with injury, and it is of this unquestionable injury that we complain.

CANADA.

Fellow-citizens: It cannot be doubted that the pendency of this great question will be always a cloud upon the relations of two Powers when there should be sunshine. Good men on both sides should desire its settlement in such way as most to promote good will, and to make the best precedent for civilization. But there will be those who, with the best intent, mar any "snap judgment" make friends or establish any rule for the future. Sometimes there are whispers of territorial compensation, and Canada is named as the consideration. But he knows England little, and also little of that great English liberty from Magna Charta to the Somerset case, who supposes that this nation could undertake any such transfer. And he knows little also of our country and that great liberty which is ours, who supposes that we could permit such a transfer. On each side there is liberty. Territory may be conveyed, but not a people. I allude to this suggestion only because it has been made in the public press and been answered from England. But the United States can never be indifferent to Canada, nor to the other British Provinces, near neighbors and kindred. It is well known historically that even before the Declaration of Independence our fathers hoped that Canada would take part with them. WASHINGTON was strong in this hope; so was FRANKLIN. The Continental Congress, by express resolve, invited Canada, and then sent forth its address, with BENJAMIN FRANKLIN of this Board, "to form a United Union" with the Colonies and the people of Canada. In the address to Canada, which was signed in behalf of Congress by JOHN HANCOCK, President, the Commissioners are among other things enjoined to remind the Canadians that "it is our earnest desire to adopt them into the Union as a sister colony, and to secure the same general system of mild and equable laws for them and ourselves, with only such local differences as may be agreeable to each colony respectively," and further, that in the opinion of the Continental Congress, "their interest and ours are inseparably united." (American Archives, vol. V., p. 812, 4th series.) Long ago the Continental Congress passed away, and long ago the great Commissioner rested from his labors. But the invitation survives not only in the archives of our history, but in all American hearts, constant and continuing as when first issued—believing, as we do, that such a Union is the fullness of time, with the good-will of the mother country and the assent of both parties, must be the harbinger of infinite good. Nor do I doubt that this will be accomplished. Such a Union was clearly foreseen by the late RICHARD COBDEN, who, in a letter to myself, bearing date London, 7th November, 1869, wrote: "I agree with you that nature has decided that Canada and the United States must become one for all purposes of inter-communicating. Whether they also shall be united in the same Federal Government must depend upon the two parties to the Union. I can assure you that there will be no repetition of the policy of 1776 on our part to prevent our North American colonies from pursuing their interests in their own way. If the people of Canada are tolerably unanimous in wishing to sever the very slight thread which now binds them to this country, I see no reason why, if good faith and ordinary temper be observed, it should not be done amicably." Nearly twenty years have passed since these prophetic words, and enough has already taken place to give assurance of the rest. Reciprocity, which is so often declined on both sides, will be transfigured in Union, while our Plural Unit is strength-ened and extended. The end is certain; nor shall we wait long for its mighty fulfillment. Its beginning is the establishment of peace at home, through which the national unity shall become manifest. This is the first step. The rest will follow. In the procession of events it is now at hand, and he is blind who does not discern it. From the frozen sea to the tepid waters of the Mexican Gulf, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the whole vast continent—smiling with untestreched prairies where the coal fields below vie with the infinite corn fields above—teeming with iron, copper, silver and gold—filling fast with a free people to whom the telegraph and steam are constant servants—breathing already with schools, colleges and libraries—studded with inland seas where fleets are sailing—the whole interlaced by rivers which are highways, and "poured round all old ocean's flood"—all this will be the great Republic, one and indivisible, with a common Constitution, a common liberty, and a common glory.

The address occupied an hour and three quarters in delivery, and was received with frequent outbursts of applause.

The Committee on Credentials then reported that 300 towns were represented by 1,021 delegates, and without any debate Governor CLAFLIN and Lieutenant-Governor TUCKER were renominated for another term. The rest of the ticket is as follows:

Secretary of State, OLIVER WARNER.
Attorney-General, CHARLES ALLEN.
Treasurer and Receiver-General, JACOB H. LOUD.
Auditor of the Commonwealth, CHARLES ESDICOTT.

The name of JULIUS L. CLARK was withdrawn before any action regarding the choice of a candidate for Auditor was taken, it being stated that a personal friend of his was in the field, against whom he would not run.

The Convention then took a recess until 3 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Immediately after reassembling, the Committee on Resolutions reported as follows:

THE PLATFORM.

1. Resolved, That we reaffirm our devotion to the principles and policy of the Republican Party, which arrested national dismemberment, proclaimed liberty to all the oppressed of the land, vanquished a most formidable rebellion, preserved the integrity and unity of the Republic, and placed on enduring foundations its safety, prosperity and glory.

2. Resolved, That the Democratic Party, by its close alliance with the slave power during a whole generation, its sympathy with the public enemies during the late civil war, its constant endeavors to perpetuate disorder in the rebel States, and its systematic adoption of doctrines of practical repudiation, has forfeited forever all claims to the confidence of the people, and cannot without great peril to their liberties and fortunes be intrusted with the government of the nation or of this Commonwealth.

3. Resolved, That the reconstructed States are not yet beyond the watchful care of the National Government; and that the legislative and executive departments should take all lawful and constitutional measures to guarantee liberty, personal security and equal rights to all the people thereof. With malice toward none, with charity to all, we welcome the fully repentant rebels back to the privileges of fellow-citizens, while we insist upon the complete protection of all loyal men, white and black.

4. Resolved, That the Administration of President GRANT, for its moderation and firmness in its foreign and domestic policy, its scrupulous regard for the public faith, as pledged to the public creditors, its reforms in the direction of economy, and its able management of the public resources, whereby the national debt has been reduced and the national credit maintained and raised, has fully justified the confidence reposed in it, and gives promise of great and lasting benefit to the country.

5. Resolved, As we contemplate the high place which our country, now relieved of slavery, holds in the family of nations, the widening influence of its example, and the marvelous development of its resources, it is becoming to remember gratefully the patriot soldiers and sailors, living and dead, by whose toils and blood in our civil war this precious land was kept one and indivisible. The commemoration of their deed by fitting tablets of enduring materials, and the care of their disabled survivors and their bereaved families will remain a perpetual duty.

6. Resolved, That we regard as political sins of prime importance the encouragement of the moral, educational and industrial interests of the State; a just distribution of the burdens of taxation, so that they shall fall where they can be most easily borne; a rigid economy in public expenditure, less special legislation for private and corporate interests, a material abridgment of the sessions of the Legislature, and the requirement of high personal character in all public officers.

7. Resolved, That the Republican Party recognize all the rights and privileges which belong to labor, and that the same chartered rights and privileges which are extended to organized capital, by legislation, should also be extended to organized labor.

8. Resolved, That the Republican Party is a national party, coextensive with the country; that in this Commonwealth it applies no tests not exacted in other States; that it ought not here to add to or subtract from the national creed; that diverse views upon the best method of suppressing intemperance are honestly held among members, and that the decision as to what legislation upon the sale of intoxicating liquors is likely to prove most salutary should be left entirely to the will of the people as indicated by the Senators and Representatives elected by their votes.

Resolved, That Governor CLAFLIN has in his official term demonstrated the same integrity of purpose and capacity for affairs which have always been conspicuous in his private life, and we commend him and the other nominees of the Convention to the suffrages of the people of the Commonwealth.

Mr. W. W. RICE, of Worcester, who reported the resolutions, stated, after reading them, that the whole series, with the exception of the eighth resolve, received the unanimous assent of the Committee. One member objected to the eighth resolution, and would ask leave to offer a substitute. Mr. GEORGE O. CARPENTER, of Boston, the gentleman alluded to, then offered the following as a substitute for the eighth resolution:

Resolved, That the Republican Party are convinced that the so-called Prohibitory law and its modes of enforcement are not satisfactory to the public, and although as a party they are opposed to the unrestricted sale of intoxicating liquors, yet they recognize the right of its members to agree or differ in sustaining or opposing this law.

The reading of this resolution created considerable sensation. A motion was made to lay upon the table, but the Chair deciding that this would carry all the resolutions with it, the motion was rejected. Mr. RODNEY FRENCH, of New-Bedford, made a brief and energetic speech against the substitute, after which the previous question was ordered and the substitute resolution was rejected by an almost unanimous vote. The resolutions as reported were then adopted.

The Convention then adjourned, after passing a vote of thanks to Senator SUMNER.

The Convention passed off with a smoothness that was quite unlooked for. Mr. SUMNER's address did much to divert the attention of the delegates from the narrow ends of purely local interest to the great questions of national concern; and when he concluded, it is quite safe to say that many matters which earlier in the day had excited a very alarming importance were almost wholly forgotten.

The ticket was nominated with a single interruption, and the difficult task of adopting a platform was performed with remarkable ease and entire success. The question of the proper method of regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors by law was remitted to the Legislature, and prohibition was wisely not a party test.

The Tenement-House Question and the Board of Health.

A communication was presented to the Board of Health yesterday from the attorney and counsel, on the subject of tenement-houses. Mr. BLISS says that the first step toward the reform of the innumerable evils peculiar to tenement-houses, must be a more thorough knowledge of the tenement-house system, a thorough inspection of the system and more publicity on the subject. Many plans have been recommended for the proper treatment of the subject. The great difficulty in relation to the improvement of tenement-houses was the general absence of a responsible person to whom the Board could look for the successful carrying out of their suggestion. A suggestion had been made that in all houses in which there are ten families, an agent or housekeeper should be appointed to whom the Board might look for the execution of its ordinances and orders. They were convinced of the utility and advantages of such a plan, and they had earnestly endeavored to find legal authority for it, but there was none. The communication was ordered on file.
